Stanivuković, 2017-09-01 Europeanization as Discursive Practice adopts a poststructuralist reading of Europeanization to study the effects of EU accession in the light of political territoriality and consequent state building processes in the EU and Central and Eastern European countries CEECs and the Western Balkans from 1990 2013 Focusing on how domestic actors have framed Europe EU norms in the debates on territorial reforms and the implications of this framing on policy reforms it asks how competing articulations of the EU and its norms construct state territoriality in the given political and policy debates The book argues that the European Union acted as a discursive force and a challenge to the established structures of understanding of territoriality statehood and power With this the author proposes a new research model for the study of Europeanization that goes beyond the neo institutionalist account of the EU s policy norm transfer to member non member states This text will be of key interest to students scholars and practitioners of European integration EU foreign policy enlargement policy and regional policy and territoriality in post socialist spaces Security, the Environment and

Emancipation Matt McDonald, 2012-01-30 This book offers an examination of the role of emancipation in the study and practice of security focusing on the issue of environmental change The end of the Cold War created a context in which traditional approaches to security could be systematically questioned This period also saw a concerted attempt in IR to argue that environmental change constituted a threat to security This book argues that such a notion is problematic as it suggests that a universal definition of security is possible which prevents a recognition of security as a site of contestation in which a range of actors articulate alternative visions of who or what is in need of being secured If security is understood and approached in traditional terms as the territorial preservation of the nation state from external threat then it is indeed

difficult to see how environmental issues would benefit from being placed on states security agenda If however security is defined in terms of the emancipation of the most vulnerable individuals from contingent structural oppressions then drawing a relationship between environmental change and security may be beneficial for redressing those environmental issues and prioritising the needs of those most at risk from the manifestations of global environmental change This book takes the limitations of contemporary approaches to the relationship between the environment and security as its starting point and seeks to do two things First it aims to illustrate the ways in which arguments over approaches to environmental issues can be viewed as contestation over the meaning of security in particular political contexts Central here is the composition and assumptions of the dominant security discourse to emerge regarding those issues a framework of meaning for the most important forms of action on behalf of a particular group defining the terms for meaningful contestation and negotiation about security itself within that group As such the book attempts to illustrate the dynamics of competition over the meaning of security with reference to environmental issues particularly focusing on instances of political change in the dominant security discourse through which that issue is approached In the process the author points to the central role of these dominant security discourses in underpinning the most practically significant actions regarding environmental issues such as deforestation and global climate change The book employs methodological tools that enable a focus on how particular frameworks of meaning are constituted and become dominant how they provide a lens through which various issues are approached and how discourses most consistent with redressing environmental change and the suffering of the most vulnerable might come to provide the framework through which security is viewed in particular contexts This book will be of much interest to students of Critical Security Studies geography sociology IR and Political Science in general

redefinitions of key concepts and offers new insights into the ways we understand security environment connections Case studies evaluate if and how environment and security discourses are being used to understand a range of environmental issues and how a feminist environmental security discourse contributes to our understanding of security environment connections This multidisciplinary volume draws on literature from the environmental sciences security studies and sociology to highlight the complex human insecurities that often accompany environmental change As conceptualizations of security continue to shift and broaden to include environmental issues and concerns it is imperative that gender informs the debate

China in the UN Security Council Decision-making on Iraq Suzanne Xiao Yang, 2013 With the rupture of the UN Security Council in March 2003 over the US spearheaded intervention in Iraq the attempts made to subject the use of force to the rule of law had failed Widespread European US disagreement of the role of the UNSC has hindered more effective decisions for China and its European and American counterparts in the Security Council Iraq China and the UN Security Council examines the role of China's policy behaviour in relation to the Iraq intervention in order to develop a better understanding of this fast rising power within the UN It looks at key questions such as What consequences may arise if China's actions are based on a set of values and national interests far removed from those of the major Western powers Could China's attitude disrupt the traditional working and normative practice of the United Nations The book will be of interest to scholars and students of international relations and Chinese Politics

Gender and International Security Laura Sjoberg, 2009-10-16 This book defines the relationship between gender and international security analyzing and critiquing international security theory and practice from a gendered perspective Gender issues have an important place in the international security landscape but have been neglected both in the theory and practice of international security The passage and implementation of UN Security Council Resolution 1325 on Security Council operations the integration of gender concerns into peacekeeping the management of refugees post conflict disarmament and reintegration and protection for non combatants in times of war shows the increasing importance of gender sensitivity for actors on all fronts in global security This book aims to improve the quality and quantity of conversations between feminist security studies and security studies more generally in order to demonstrate the importance of gender analysis to the study of international security and to expand the feminist research program in Security Studies The chapters included in this book not only challenge the assumed irrelevance of gender they argue that gender is not a subsection of security studies to be compartmentalized or briefly considered as a side issue Rather the contributors argue that gender is conceptually empirically and normatively essential to studying international security They do so by critiquing and reconstructing key concepts of and theories in international security by looking for the increasingly complex roles women play as security actors and by looking at various contemporary security issues through gendered lenses Together these chapters make the case that accurate rigorous and ethical scholarship of international security cannot be produced without taking account of women's presence in or the gendering of world politics This book will be of interest to all students of critical security studies gender studies and International Relations in general Laura Sjoberg is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Florida She has a Phd in International Relations and Gender Studies from the University of Southern California and is the author of Gender Justice and the Wars in Iraq 2006 and with Caron Gentry Mothers Monsters Whores Women's Violence in Global Politics 2007

Human and Water Security in Israel and Jordan Philip Jan Schäfer, 2012-10-28 The work aims at answering the question as to how far discourses on human security are present in Jordan and Israel if they converge and if political solutions for the issue of water security could be derived The analysis is based on the assumption that from human security perspective common solutions for urgent problems can be derived more easily than out of a perspective of national security Yet it is acknowledged that according to a new security perspective different security threats are being identified by relevant actors An empirical analysis of written statements and utterances of the respective security elites establishes the methodological tool for the identification of human security discourses in Israel and Jordan Subsequently it is estimated how far water is presented as a matter of national security in Israel and Jordan using the theory of securitization
