

Brief Description

Margaret Newman was influenced by Martha Roger's theory of Unitary Human Beings, Itzhak Bentov's concept of the evolution of consciousness, Arthur Young's theory of process, and David Bohm's theory of implicate as she developed her model of nursing. The theory of health as expanding consciousness was stimulated by concern for those for whom health as the absence of disease or disability is not possible. Nurses often relate to such people: people facing the uncertainty, devastation, loss and eventual death associated with chronic illness. The theory has progressed to include the health of all persons regardless of their health status. The theory asserts that every person in every situation, no matter how disadvantaged and hopeless it may seem, is part of the universal process of expanding consciousness, a process of becoming more of oneself, of finding greater meaning in life, and of reaching new dimensions of consciousness with other people and the world.

Daring to Care Susan Gelfand Malka, 2022-08-15. Beginning in the 1960s, second-wave feminism inspired and influenced dramatic changes in the nursing profession. Susan Gelfand Malka argues that feminism helped end nursing's subordination to medicine and provided nurses with greater autonomy and professional status. She discusses two distinct eras in nursing history. The first extended from the mid-1960s to the mid-1980s when feminism seemed to belittle the occupation in its analysis of gender subordination but also fueled nursing leaders' drive for greater authority and independence. The second era began in the mid-1980s when feminism grounded in the ethics of care appealed to a much broader group of caregivers and was incorporated into nursing education. While nurses accepted aspects of feminism, they did not necessarily identify as feminists. Nonetheless, they used passed on and developed feminist ideas that brought about nursing school curricula changes and the increase in self directed and specialized roles available to caregivers in the twenty first century Index to Advertisements for Next of Kin, Heirs at Law, Legatees, Etc., Etc International Claim Agency (Pittsburgh, Pa.),1912 Faith Community Nursing P.
