Computational Social Science and Complex Systems János Kertész,Rosario Nunzio Mantegna,Salvatore Micciché,2019-11-15 For many years the development of large scale quantitative social science was hindered by a lack of data Traditional methods of data collection like surveys were very useful but were limited The situation has of course changed with the development of computing and information communication technology and we now live in a world of data deluge where the question has become how to extract important information from the plethora of data that can be accessed. Big Data has made it possible to study societal questions which were once impossible to deal with but new tools and new multidisciplinary approaches are required. Physicists together with economists sociologists computer scientists etc have played an important role in their development. This book presents the 9 lectures delivered at the CCIII Summer Course Computational Social Science and Complex Systems held as part of the International School of Physics Enrico Fermi in Varenna Italy from 16-21 July 2018. The course had the aim of presenting some of the recent developments in the interdisciplinary fields of computational social science and econophysics to PhD students and young researchers with lectures focused on recent problems investigated in computational social science. Addressing some of the basic questions and many of the subtleties of the emerging field of computational social science the book will be of interest to students researchers and advanced research professionals alike.

The Political Economy of Europe's Incomplete Single Market
 David Howarth, Tal Sadeh, 2014-04-10
 Progress in European market integration over the past two decades has come at the expense of growing flexibility or differentiation in the laws that govern the Single Market (SM) as well as the way that these laws are implemented. This volume examines how the completion of the SM has been held back in the varied implementation of European Union competition policy variation in national policies on services corporate law telecommunications energy taxation and gambling and the EU's uneven transportation network. These sectors and issue areas form the frontier at which the main political struggles over the future shape of the SM have taken place in the past decade. Broadly progress in economic integration in the EU has been complicated by the need to reconcile perfections to the SM with the global competitiveness of European producers and efficiency gains with ideational and normative concerns. In services there is a clash between deregulation and social policy. Financial integration has had to reconcile different institutionalized views among the member states about the place of finance in the economy and society. The SM notion supposedly entails a concrete set of substantive policy commitments that form the basis of the ever closer union. However increasing differentiation in the SM undermines the identification of the EU's core constitutional commitments. This book was published as a special issue of the Journal of European Public Policy.
