The Ordos Plateau of China Hong Jiang,1999 The Ordos Plateau of China is an account of the regional human environmental history of the Ordos Plateau a dryland region inhabited by Chinese farmers and Mongolian shepherds The book surveys the environmental change i e changes in vegetation and soil during 1942 92 it also examines such societal factors as government policy resource use institutions economics population and cultural attitudes and beliefs and investigates how these factors have contributed to environmental change in th Ordos Plateau Throughout the discussion the author retains keen awareness of the intricate interrelations among the environmental and societal factors Following the theoretical framework of human dimensions of regional environmental change this book seeks to contribute to the understanding of human environment relationships in the Chinese socio political and historical contexts The Ordos Plateau of China is among a few books written on China s regional human environmental issues by a Chinese and US trained geographer in recent years It reflects a combination of the Chinese strength in regional environmental studies and the western tradition of nature society geography Based primarily on first hand materials and other documents that are not readily accessible in English this book provides a richly contextualized account of Ordos environmental history and its relationship with society to the English speaking world It also helps the reader to better understand human environmental issues in China in general An Endangered Environmental Region Hong Jiang,1997 China's Environmental Crisis J. Kassiola,2010-11-08 This path breaking collection covers the significance of China s extreme environmental challenges for both Chinese society and the world how these challenges are impacting domestic Chinese society and its political institutions and how these institutions are responding in their efforts to address the environmental problems Global Environmental Risk Jeanne X. Kasperson,Roger E. Kasperson,2013-05-13 Despite international initiatives such as the Earth Summit in 1992 and ongoing efforts to implement the Kyoto Protocol human activities continue to register a destructive toll on the planetary environment At root research on global environmental risk seeks new pathways for reversing unsustainable trends curtailing ongoing destructive activities and creating a life sustaining planet This book takes stock of the distinctive challenges posed by global environmental risks the capacity of knowledge systems to identify and characterize such risks and the competence of human society to manage the unprecedented complexity Particular attention trains on engaging in ways conducive to enhancing social learning and adaptation the large uncertainties inherent in these risks Various chapters enlist different scales of analysis to explore the manifestation and causes of global environmental risks in all the diversity of their regional expression Throughout the editors and contributors accord prominence to the vulnerability of people and places to environmental degradation Understanding vulnerability is a neglected key to assessing the nature of the risks and determining strategies for altering trajectories of threat Global risk futures the editors argue are not intractable and are still amenable to a risk analysis enterprise that is democratic in principle humanistic in concept and geared to the realities that pertain to the particular societies locales and regions that will ultimately bear the risk

Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation Karl S. Zimmerer, 2006-09-15 Examining the geographical dimensions of environmental management and conservation activities implemented on landscapes worldwide Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation creates a new framework and collects original case studies to explore recent developments in the interaction of humans and their environment Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation makes four important arguments about the recent coupling of conservation and globalization that is reshaping the place of nature in human environmental change First it has led to an unprecedented number of spatial arrangements whose environmental management goals and prescribed activities vary along a spectrum from strict biodiversity protection to sustainable utilization involving agriculture food production and extractive activities Conservation and globalization are also leading by necessity to new scales of management in these activities that rely on environmental science thus shifting the spatial patterning of humans and the environment This interaction results as well in the unprecedented importance of boundaries and borders transnational border issues pose both opportunities and threats to global conservation proposed by organizations and institutions that are themselves international Lastly Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation argues that the local level has been integral to globalization while the regional level is often eclipsed at the peril of the successful implementation of conservation and management programs Bridging the gap between geography and life science Globalization and New Geographies of Conservation will appeal to a broad range of students of the environment conservation planning biodiversity management and development and globalization studies
