Dyslexia in Children Christopher B. Hayes, 2006 Dyslexia is a brain based type of learning disability that specifically impairs a person's ability to read Although the disorder varies from person to person common characteristics among people with dyslexia are difficulty with phonological processing the manipulation of sounds and or rapid visual verbal responding The syndrome of dyslexia does not imply low intelligence or poor educational potential and is independent of race and social background Although dyslexia seems to be more prevalent among males than females the exact ratio is unknown the most commonly quoted figures are between 3 1 and 5 1 The evidence suggests that in at least two thirds of cases dyslexia has a genetic cause but in some cases birth difficulties may play a role Dyslexia may overlap with related conditions such as dyspraxia attention deficit disorder with or without hyperactivity and dysphasia In childhood its effects can be misattributed to emotional or behavioural disorders By adulthood many dyslexics will have developed sophisticated compensating strategies that may mask their difficulties This new book presents state of the art research in this dynamic field

Research and Global Perspectives in Learning Disabilities Daniel P. Hallahan, Barbara K. Keogh, 2001-03-01 This volume honors the founder of the International Academy for Research in Learning Disabilities IARLD William M Cruickshank and his many accomplishments His influence on special education in general and learning disabilities in specific is evident throughout the world Consistent with his international activities the contributors to this book represent nine different countries The chapters reflect a range of perspectives on the state of the art in learning disabilities documenting both commonalities and differences across countries Taken together the chapters provide a comprehensive and informative picture of learning disabilities Comprehensive Handbook of Personality and Psychopathology, Child Psychopathology

Learning to Be Literate Deborah MacPhee, Patricia Paugh, 2023-04-04 There is not one right way to teach a child to read Recent media stories about education have featured the Science of Reading whose proponents typically present the systematic teaching of phonics as a one size fits all method that guarantees reading success for all students But as literacy scholars Patricia Paugh and Deborah MacPhee demonstrate the decoding of words is only one of many skills that are central to an effective early literacy education In Learning to Be Literate they present a four part framework for active literacy learning that eschews oppositional arguments about different approaches and instead situates children as meaning makers the whole point of being literate There is no single or simple solution that will fit every child But by using the ALL framework to inform instruction educators can help young learners think deeply about ideas and language at the same time as they learn to work out the sounds and symbol systems of language
