Kroskrity, Margaret C. Field, 2009-04-15 Beliefs and feelings about language vary dramatically within and across Native American cultural groups and are an acknowledged part of the processes of language shift and language death This volume samples the language ideologies of a wide range of Native American communities from the Canadian Yukon to Guatemala to show their role in sociocultural transformation. These studies take up such active issues as insiderness in Cherokee language ideologies, contradictions of space time for the Northern Arapaho language socialization and Paiute identity and orthography choices and language renewal among the Kiowa. The authors, including members of indigenous speech communities who participate in language renewal efforts, discuss not only Native Americans' conscious language ideologies but also the often revealing relationship between these beliefs and other more implicit realizations of language use as embedded in community practice. The chapters discuss the impact of contemporary language issues related to grammar, language use, the relation between language and social identity, and emergent language ideologies themselves in Native American speech communities. And although they portray obvious variation in attitudes toward language across communities, they also reveal commonalities, notably the emergent ideological process of iconization between a language and various national, ethnic, and tribal identities. As fewer Native Americans continue to speak their own language, this timely volume provides valuable, grounded studies of language ideologies in action, those indigenous to Native communities as well as those imposed by outside institutions or language researchers. It considers the emergent interaction of indigenous and imported ideologies and the resulting effect on language beliefs, practices, and struggles in today's Indian Country as it demonstrates the practical implications of recognizing a multiplicity of indigenous language ideologies and their impact on heritage language maintenance and renewal.

Typology of Pluractional Constructions in the Languages of the World Simone Mattioli, 2019-04-24. The aim of this book is to give the first large scale typological investigation of pluractionality in the languages of the world. Pluractionality is defined as the morphological modification of the verb to express a plurality of situations that can additionally involve a plurality of participants and/or spaces. Based on a 246 language sample, the main characteristics of pluractionality are described and discussed throughout the book. Firstly, a description of the functions that pluractional markers cross linguistically express is presented, and the relationships occurring among them are explained through the semantic map model. Then, the marking strategies that languages display to express such functions are illustrated, and some issues concerning the formal identification are briefly discussed as well. The typological generalizations are corroborated, showing how pluractional markers work in three specific languages: Akawaio, Beja, and Maa. In conclusion, the theoretical conceptualization of pluractionality is discussed, referring to the Radical Construction Grammar approach.

Telicity and Durativity Andrea Luise Wilhelm,2007-01-22 This book studies the linguistic representation of events by examining the relevance of two salient event characteristics telicity and durativity to the grammatical system of natural language The study of events and of event characteristics is an important testing ground for theories on the boundary between extralinguistic and linguistic knowledge and on the relation between semantics and syntax Telicity and durativity are notions which have become increasingly influential in both the semantic and the syntactic i e grammaticalized representation of events The book furthers the understanding of events through the comparison of two genetically and typologically distinct languages German and D ne Sulin Chipewyan Athapaskan an indigenous language of Northwestern Canada It contains the first in depth documentation of the aspectual system of D ne Sulin and a careful analysis of the aspectual behaviour of German particle verbs A stringent methodology considers semantic pragmatic and grammatical factors in both languages The data reveal that telicity and durativity belong to profoundly different semantic and grammatical domains and that neither notion is grammaticalized universally While both notions are represented semantically in German as well as in D ne Sulin telicity is grammaticalized only in the former and durativity is grammaticalized only in the latter
