Property in East Central Europe Hannes Siegrist,Dietmar Müller,2014-11-01 Property is a complex phenomenon comprising cultural social and legal rules During the twentieth century property rights in land suffered massive interference in Central and Eastern Europe The promise of universal and formally equal rights of land ownership ensuring predictability of social processes and individual autonomy was largely not fulfilled The national appropriation of property in the interwar period and the communist era represent an onerous legacy for the postcommunist re construction of a liberal individualist property regime However as the scholars in this collection show after the demise of communism in Eastern Europe property is again a major factor in shaping individual identity and in providing the political order and culture with a foundational

Altmark region in the German East and in the Danube Bavarian Forest region in the West Pr gl provides a close up view of the power politics involved in government policies and programs In identifying mechanisms of power refusal co optation compromise normalization and silencing of difference Pr gl illustrates how these mechanisms operate in arguments over gender relations within the state Her feminist constructivist approach to global restructuring as a gendered process brings into view multiple levels of governance and the variety of gender constructions operating in different societies Ultimately Pr gl offers a new understanding of patriarchy as diverse contested and in flux Jacket photograph iStockphoto com Wojtek Kryczka
