The Impact of Privatization and Competition in the Telecommunications Sector around the World

Abstract: Abstract. Using a comprehensive country-level panel data set covering the period from 1981 to 1998, we examine the impact of privatization and competition in the telecommunications sector around the world. Privatization contributed substantially to labor shedding, output growth, network expansion, and improvements in labor productivity as well as total factor productivity. But how countries privatized is important. Share issue privatization facilitated the development of the mobile market segment. Granting a ... Show more

An Empirical Analysis of competition, Privatization, and Regulation in telecommunications Market in Africa and Latin America Scott J. Wallsten,1999

The Impact of Privatization and Competition in the Telecommunications Sector Around the World Wei Li,Lixin Colin Xu,2004 Using a comprehensive country level panel data set covering the period from 1981 to 1998 we examine the impact of privatization and competition in the telecommunications sector around the world Privatization contributed substantially to labor shedding output growth network expansion and improvements in labor productivity as well as total factor productivity But how countries privatized is important On the one hand share issue privatization facilitated the development of the mobile market segment Granting a newly privatized operator a period of exclusive market access on the other hand reduced the gains from privatization owing to the output restricting tendency associated with market power but did not entirely negate them The presence of competitive pressure in the market was associated with more employment higher output faster network expansion and higher labor and total factor productivity We find evidence of complementarity between privatization and competition in that competition increased the gains from privatization and vice versa Our estimates show that half of the output growth between 1990 and 1998 was attributable to privatization and competition after controlling for input growth Competition appeared to have a larger impact on labor and total factor productivity than did privatization

The Privatisation of European Telecommunications Johan From,Kjell A. Eliassen,2017-11-28 This international volume presents a comprehensive comparative study of the transformation of the European telecommunications industry from 1990 to the present The book focuses on the old incumbent operators and their dramatic change from state agencies to listed companies It analyzes the liberalization process as well as the corporatization and privatization of these companies The contributors assess the conditions for the transformations taking place the driving forces for change the effects to management the efforts of the EU during these processes and ultimately the role of the private owner Political science publications have all but excluded analysis of the newly privatized companies their contribution to the liberalization process both before and after privatization and the interplay between the national political and company levels The book redresses this shortcoming and also features a double empirical focus in that the main national incumbents in Europe are analyzed and compared to Telenor the Norwegian former incumbent telecommunications industry starts from a classic perspective While in principle regulation benefits social welfare and efficient allocation of resources past regulatory experience shows that regulation can be flawed and lead to welfare harm rather than good In the telecommunications industry specifically inappropriately designed sector specific remedies and regulatory delays in the introduction of new telecommunications services can hold up the development of the market towards effective competition and could incur considerable welfare losses In addition conventional antitrust analysis still lags behind the dynamic nature of the electronic communications markets Milena Stoyanova sets out to establish a new understanding of the role of sector specific regulation and competition law enforcement in the electronic communications sector addressing such questions as the following and Why a new regulatory framework and Are sectoral regulation and competition law enforcement mutually exclusive or complementary and Why should electronic communications markets be regulated to conform to competition law principles and What does competition law add to sector specific regulation and What is the relationship or proportion between regulation and competition law enforcement An overview of the telecommunications liberalization process initiated at European Community level reveals such problems as a divergent approach of national regulatory authorities in the application of one and the same norms inability of competition authorities to rightly assess the technicalities underlying a competition problem and difficulty in carrying out a periodical oversight of compliance with the competition law remedies The author discusses the legal basis and rationale for the application of the essential facility doctrine to the electronic communications sector and argues for new regulatory responses to the emergence of collective dominant firms in an oligopolistic setting and to the potential of multifirm conduct to restrict competition through price squeezing and other tactics The book concludes with a specific case study on the harmonisation of recent Bulgarian legislation with the European Community sector specific and competition law regimes and proposes the electronic communications sector Effective competition in the electronic communications market is crucial for securing the dynamic role of the entire information and communications technologies sector of which electronic communications form the largest segment The sound and well informed recommendations in this book ably address common and persistent problems making Competition Problems in Liberalized Telecommunications a forward looking mainstay for practitioners and other professionals involved in all aspects of the field     The Financial Economics of Privatization William L.

Competition Problems in Liberalized Telecommunications Milena Stoyanova,2008-01-01 This innovative study of the role of competition law in the

Meggison, 2005-01-13 Since 1981 over 100 governments around the world have raised over 1 trillion through the sale of SOEs to private investors Privatization programs have transformed the role of the state in virtually all major economies and have massively increased the capitalization and liquidity of all non U S stock markets The focus of this book lies on where privatization stands today and what are the next frontiers the why and how behind countries who privatize certain industries whether privatization works as an economic tool and important insights relevant to financial institutions such as how to value privatized industries how share offerings differ from private offerings and how countries go about harnessing private capital

The book will also represent a key and unique source for information related to the details of asset sales privatization a summary of statistics of privatized companies from 54 international stock exchanges regulatory changes and sources for privatization information for investors government officials bankers and financial specialists The volume will serve as an invaluable reference for professionals and as a core or supplementary text in privatization courses

Telecommunications performance, reforms, and governance , EU Competition Law and Regulation in the Converging Telecommunications, Media and IT Sectors Nikos Th Nikolinakos, 2006-01-01 This book presents the most thoroughgoing model yet offered to ensure the emergence of a genuinely competitive electronic communications industry in Europe In the course of its in depth analysis the discussion focuses on such factors as the following EU telecommunications policy as revealed in liberalization and harmonization legislative measures the EU electronic communications framework case law covering issues of refusal to supply and the essential facilities doctrine application of Article 82 EC to bottlenecks specific types of an undertakings unilateral behaviour that may often occupy NRAs and competition authorities in the context of their ex post competition law investigations under Article 82 EC strategic alliances and mergers in the move toward multimedia access to premium content and the emergence of new media the scope of content regulation in the online environment and broadband regulation of local loop unbundling and bitstream access The book also provides practical guidance on issues concerning the complicated market definition and analysis mechanism promulgated by the European Commission s Recommendation and Guidelines

Inside Latin American Telecommunications Steven Harper, 1997 Competition Policies in Emerging Economies Claudia Schatan, Eugenio Rivera Urrutia, 2008-07-11 As countries large and small rich and poor are drawn inexorably into the global economy protectionist policies are proving increasingly inefficient and ineffective for driving growth The countries of Latin America which have long pursued agendas of state ownership and heavy regulation of key industries began to institute a series of reforms in the 1980s and 1990s designed to promote competition and business creation However without the legal and institutional framework to support these policies and thus guarantee resource efficient behavior on the part of business owners the record has been spotty at best

Competition Policies in Emerging Economies features in depth analysis of two key industries telecommunications and banking in several Central American nations to shed light on the dynamics of the transition to deregulation and trade liberalization and learn from the experiences of these economies This book has a three fold purpose 1 to examine the competition conditions and policies of small developing countries of Central America and hence cover an area where very little information exists 2 develop an in depth analysis of regulation and competition policies in two key industrial sectors with poor competition records telecommunications and banking 3 link the former results analysis with other international experiences in order to derive research and policy recommendations that can be applied to other small developing and emerging economies Featuring discussion of political legal economic financial cultural and organization level issues the book provides unique perspectives on the forces resisting competitive practices and offers suggestions for overcoming them

Multi-Modal Competition and the Future of Mail Michael A. Crew, Paul R. Kleindorfer, 2012 This compilation of original papers selected from the 19th Conference on Postal and Delivery Economics and authored by an international cast of economists lawyers regulators and industry practitioners addresses perhaps the major problem that has ever faced the postal sector electronic competition from information and communication technologies ICT This has increased significantly over the last few years with a consequent serious drop in mail volume All postal services have been hard hit by ICT but probably the hardest hit is the United States Postal Service which has lost almost a quarter of its mail volume since 2007 The loss of mail volume has a devastating effect on scale economies which now work against post offices forcing up their unit costs Strategies to stem the loss in volume include non linear pricing or volume discounts increased efficiency and the development of new products This loss of mail volume from ICT is one of a number of current problems addressed in this volume The Universal Service Obligation USO continues to be a leading issue and concern that ICT undermines postal services ability to finance the USO is discussed The importance of measuring and forecasting demand and costs take on even greater importance as ICT undermines the foundations of the postal business This thought provoking book brings to bear new analyses of the most serious threat post offices have ever faced and raises fundamental questions as to the future of mail Multi Modal Competition and the Future of Mail is an ideal resource for students researchers in regulation and competition law postal administrations policy makers consulting firms and regulatory bodies Privatization and Emerging Equity Markets Ira W. Lieberman, Christopher D. Kirkness, 1998-01-01 The text provides an overview of privatization and emerging equity markets describes the role of privatization providing critical mass for new stock markets and examines investment opportunities that deepen existing stock markets Industry Structure and Pricing Mark A. Jamison, 2013-03-09 Industry Structure and Pricing The New Rivalry in Infrastructure extends current economic models by incorporating effects of actual and potential rivalry in markets outside the markets of immediate interest Focusing on the contestable model the author shows how diverse patterns of actual and potential rivalry called multilateral rivalry or MLR affect the appropriateness of many regulatory policies It is specifically shown that many conclusions of the contestability literature are overly generous to firms that might want to protect or extend their monopoly positions While this book s refinement to existing economic theory gives strong results it is still based on static production functions and demands integrated to provide a dynamic view of multilateral rivalry Regulation, Institutions, and Commitment in the British Telecommunications, An Empirical Analysis of Competition, Privatization, and Regulation in Telecommunications Markets in Africa and Latin Am Scott Wallsten, 2016 Empirical analysis of telecommunications reforms in 30 African and Latin American countries yields results largely consistent with conventional wisdom Competition seems to be the most successful change agent so granting even temporary monopolies may delay the arrival of better services to consumers Reformers are correct to emphasize that regulatory reform accompany privatization as privatization without regulation reform may be costly to consumers Wallsten explores the effects of privatization competition and regulation on telecommunications performance in 30 African and Latin American countries from 1984 through 1997 Competition is associated with tangible benefits in terms of mainline penetration number of pay phones connection capacity and reduced prices Fixed effects regressions reveal that competition measured by mobile operators not owned by the incumbent telecommunications provider is correlated with increases in the per capita number of mainlines pay phones and connection capacity and with decreases in the price of local calls Privatizing an incumbent is negatively correlated with mainline penetration and connection capacity Privatization combined with regulation by an independent regulator however is positively correlated with connection capacity and substantially mitigates privatization s negative correlation with mainline penetration Reformers are right to emphasize a combination of privatization competition and regulation But researchers must explore the permutations of regulation What type of regulation do countries adopt price caps versus cost of service for example How does the regulatory agency work What is its annual budget How many employees does it have Where do the regulators come from What sort of training and experience do they have What enforcement powers does the regulatory agency have In addition researchers must deal with endogeneity of privatization competition and regulation to deal with issues of causality This paper a product of Regulation and Competition Policy Development Research Group is part of a larger research effort to analyze the role of competition in telecommunications with special emphasis on Africa The author may be contacted at wallsten stanford edu
