Creating Consumers Carolyn M. Goldstein,2012-05-28 Home economics emerged at the turn of the twentieth century as a movement to train women to be more efficient household managers At the same moment American families began to consume many more goods and services than they produced To guide women in this transition professional home economists had two major goals to teach women to assume their new roles as modern consumers and to communicate homemakers needs to manufacturers and political leaders Carolyn M Goldstein charts the development of the profession from its origins as an educational movement to its identity as a source of consumer expertise in the interwar period to its virtual disappearance by the 1970s Working for both business and government home economists walked a fine line between educating and representing consumers while they shaped cultural expectations about consumer goods as well as the goods themselves Goldstein looks beyond 1970s feminist scholarship that dismissed home economics for its emphasis on domesticity to reveal the movement's complexities including the extent of its public impact and debates about home economists' relationship to the commercial marketplace

The Intellectual Appropriation of Technology Mikael Hard, Andrew Jamison, 1998-10-27 This book examines the broad range of social and intellectual responses to technology in the first four decades of this century and suggests that these responses set the terms that continue to govern contemporary debates Starting around 1900 technology became a lively subject for debate among intellectuals writers and other opinion leaders The expansion of the machine into ever more areas of social and economic life had led to a need to interpret its meanings in a more comprehensive way than in the past World War I and its aftermath shifted the terms of this ongoing debate by underlining both the potential dangers of technology and its centrality to modern life This book examines the broad range of social and intellectual responses to technology in the first four decades of this century and suggests that these responses set the terms that continue to govern contemporary debates Focusing on the broader contexts within which intellectual positions are formed the book highlights the ways in which attitudes toward technology were shaped in a wide variety of national and organizational settings A common theme is that in debating technology people drew on their distinctive national symbols and cultural traditions By emphasizing the interplay between debates on technology and the making of modernity the book challenges standard historical accounts of the early twentieth century Contributors Ketil G Andersen Aant Elzinga Tor Halvorsen Mikael H r d Kjetil Jakobsen Andrew Jamison Catharina Landstr m Conny Mithander Sissel Myklebust Dick van Lente Peter Wagner
