Rethinking the Developmental State Vibha Pingle, Vibha Pingle, 1999 Existing arguments about the developmental state primarily examine how a developmental state acts not why it acts the way it does Vibha Pingle presents an argument about the kind of business government relations that make a state willing and able to act in a manner beneficial to development and what effect the differences in relations between bureaucrats and entrepreneurs have on emerging industries BOOK JACKET

Rethinking Development Challenges for Public Policy K. Hanson, G. Kararach, T. Shaw, 2012-04-05 Covers topical issues for Africa's development economics and politics of climate change water management public service delivery and delivering aid The authors argue that these issues should be included in the post MDG paradigm and add an important voice to recent moves by academics and practitioners to engage with each other

Developmental State Building Yusuke Takagi, Veerayooth Kanchoochat, Tetsushi Sonobe, 2019-01-18 This open access book modifies and revitalizes the concept of the developmental state to understand the politics of emerging economy through nuanced analysis on the roles of human agency in the context of structural transformation In other words there is a revived interest in the developmental state concept The nature of the emerging state is characterized by its attitude toward economic development and industrialization Emerging states have engaged in the promotion of agriculture trade and industry and played a transformative role to pursue a certain path of economic development Their success has cast doubt about the principle of laissez faire among the people in the developing world This doubt together with the progress of democratization has prompted policymakers to discover when and how economic policies should deviate from laissez faire what prevents political leaders and state institutions from being captured by vested interests and what induce them to drive economic development This book offers both historical and contemporary case studies from Japan South Korea Taiwan Singapore Indonesia Malaysia Myanmar Ethiopia Kenya and Rwanda They illustrate how institutions are designed to be developmental how political coalitions are formed to be growth oriented and how technocratic agencies are embedded in a network of business organizations as a part of their efforts for state building
