Risk Methodologies for Technological Legacies Dennis Bley, Vitaly A. Eremenko, 2012-12-06 The Cold War Era left the major participants the United States and the former Soviet Union FSU with large legacies in terms of both contamination and potential accidents Facility contamination and environmental degradation as well as the accident vulnerable facilities and equipment are a result of weapons development testing and production Although the countries face similar issues from similar activities important differences in waste management practices make the potential environmental and health risks of more immediate concern in the FSU and Eastern Europe In the West most nuclear and chemical waste is stored in known contained locations while in the East much of the equivalent material is unconfined contaminating the environment In the past decade the U S started to address and remediate these Cold War legacies Costs have been very high and the projected cost estimates for total cleanup are still increasing Currently in Russia the resources for starting such major activities continue to be unavailable

Long-Term Institutional Management of U.S. Department of Energy Legacy Waste Sites National Research Council,Commission on Geosciences, Environment, and Resources,Board on Radioactive Waste Management,Committee on the Remediation of Buried and Tank Wastes,2000-11-09 It is now becoming clear that relatively few U S Department of Energy DOE waste sites will be cleaned up to the point where they can be released for unrestricted use Long term stewardship activities to protect human health and the environment from hazards that may remain at its sites after cessation of remediation will be required for over 100 of the 144 waste sites under DOE control U S Department of Energy 1999 After stabilizing wastes that remain on site and containing them as well as is feasible DOE intends to rely on stewardship for as long as hazards persist in many cases indefinitely Physical containment barriers the management systems upon which their long term reliability depends and institutional controls intended to prevent exposure of people and the environment to the remaining site hazards will have to be maintained at some DOE sites for an indefinite period of time The Committee on Remediation of Buried and Tank Wastes finds that much regarding DOE s intended reliance on long term stewardship is at this point problematic The details of long term stewardship planning are yet to be specified the adequacy of funding is not assured and there is no convincing evidence that institutional controls and other stewardship measures are reliable over the long term Scientific understanding of the factors that govern the long term behavior of residual contaminants in the environment is not adequate Yet the likelihood that institutional management measures will fail at some point is relatively high underscoring the need to assure that decisions made in the near term are based on the best available science Improving institutional capabilities can be expected to be every bit as difficult as improving scientific and technical ones but without improved understanding of why and how institutions succeed and fail the follow through necessary to assure that long term stewardship remains effective cannot reliably be counted on to occur Long Term Institutional Management of U S Department of Energy Legacy Waste Sites examines the capabilities and limitations of the scientific technical and human and institutional systems that compose the measures that DOE expects to put into place at potentially hazardous residually contaminated sites

The Renaissance of Legacy Systems Ian Warren,2012-12-06 Today software professionals recognize that change in software systems is inevitable There are many systems currently in operation however which were developed before the need for change was understood Such systems are commonly referred to as legacy systems and were developed with relatively short lifetimes in mind Software engineering is a relatively young discipline which is continually improving to provide better support for the development of software systems What were once state of the art techniques tools and processes are now dated and have resulted in systems which are not responsive to change For historical reasons dated development practice traded maintainability for other system attributes such as cost and performance A significant number of legacy systems remain in operation because they are critical to the business processes which they support The combination of extended lifetimes and poor maintainability means that legacy systems are expensive to change and in many cases they cannot accommodate emerging requirements This is clearly an undesirable situation which until recently has been tackled by replacing the system or attempting to maintain it Replacing a legacy system is dangerous since you face the risk of losing vital business knowledge which is embedded in many old systems In many cases system replacement is not cost effective Conversely if you attempt to maintain a legacy system there is often little return on the investment in maintenance effort and the system remains difficult and expensive to change Complex cleanup : the environmental legacy of nuclear weapons production. ,
