ABSTRACT

A healthy family climate, including parents' attitudes towards their children and the quality of sibling relationships, is essential for child resilience. One of the domains where parental attitudes are determinative is the children's academic life. In an unhealthy family climate, for instance, parental pressure for academic success may cause dysfunctional sibling relationships and low-level psychological resilience in children. The aim is to investigate the mediating role of sibling relationships in the association between parental academic achievement pressure and support and children's resilience levels. Five hundred and one children (10–14 years old) participated in the study. Children completed the Parent Academic Achievement Pressure and Support Scale (PAAPSS), Sibling Relationship Questionnaire (SRQ), Child and Youth Resilience Measure (CYRM-12), and Demographic Information Form. Findings from the two different mediation models of Hayes Process Macro revealed that sibling relationship characteristics of warmth, intimacy, and status, or power, mediated the relationship between parental academic support and resilience levels. Rivalry and conflict were not significant mediators. All parental (i.e., support) and sibling relationship variables explained the 41% variance in child resilience (Model 1). Sibling relationship characteristics of warmth or intimacy, status or power, rivalry, and conflict mediated the relationship between parental academic pressure and resilience. All parental (i.e., pressure) and sibling relationship variables explained the 35% variance in child resilience (Model 2). To improve children's resilience, we propose healthier parental attitudes toward academic issues and more functional sibling relationships.

Increasing epidemics, adverse economic conditions, and risks led by technological developments (e.g., bullying) have started to draw the focus of societies back to the phenomena that adversely influence human life. For instance, the COVID-19 pandemic was one of the most terrible disasters humanity has faced. During those days, one of the most emphasized points was the need to increase the resilience of individuals, especially healthcare workers, against hopelessness, helplessness, and burnout (Shaw, 2020). Expectations that such epidemics and economic difficulties will continue (Şahinöz et al., 2022) push us to search for ways in which children can be made stronger despite these adverse conditions. The concept of resilience, which is described as "good outcomes in spite of serious threats to adaptation or development" (Masten, 2001, p. 228), is one of the most remarkable classes of phenomena. The emphasis on context is substantial when the topic is resilience. Masten (2001) suggests that one of the criteria for being defined as resilient is being exposed to a considerable risk factor for the development of a person. Similarly, we presume that family of origin experiences can be a

Sibling Relationships M. E. Lamb,B. Sutton-Smith,Brian Sutton-Smith,Michael E. Lamb,2014-01-14 First published in 1982 Since the emergence of developmental psychology early this century theorists and researchers have emphasized the family s role in shaping the child s emergent social style personality and cognitive competence In so doing however psychologists have implicitly adopted a fairly idiosyncratic definition of the family one that focuses almost exclusively on parents and mostly on mothers The realization that most families contain two parents and at least two children has occurred slowly and has brought with it recognition that children develop in the context of a diverse network of social relationships within which each person may affect every other both directly through their interactions and indirectly i e through A s effect on B who in turn influences C The family is such a social network itself embedded in a broader network of relations with neighbors relatives and social institutions Within the family relationships among siblings have received little attention until fairly recently In this volume the goal is to review the existing empirical and theoretical literature concerning the nature and importance of sibling relationships
