Losing the Plot Pardis Dabashi, 2023-11-06 An examination of the relationship between literature and classical Hollywood cinema reveals a profound longing for plot in modernist fiction The modernist novel sought to escape what Virginia Woolf called the tyranny of plot Yet even as twentieth century writers pushed against the constraints of plot driven Victorian novels plot kept its hold on them through the influence of another medium the cinema Focusing on the novels of Nella Larsen Djuna Barnes and William Faulkner writers known for their affinities and connections to classical Hollywood Pardis Dabashi links the moviegoing practices of these writers to the tensions between the formal properties of their novels and the characters in them Even when they did not feature outright happy endings classical Hollywood films often provided satisfying formal resolutions and promoted normative social and political values Watching these films modernist authors were reminded of what they were leaving behind both formally and in the name of aesthetic experimentalism by losing the plot

Palmer, 2008-12-16 This fascinating account of the regional travel accident motif within American local color literature offers a reassessment of the cultural work done by authors writing during the Gilded Age Stephanie C. Palmer shows how events like broken carriage wheels and missed trains were used by local color authors to bring together bourgeois and lower class characters thus giving readers the opportunity to see modernity coming into contact with both rural and urban life Using the works of Sarah Orne Jewett Bret Harte William Dean Howells Elizabeth Stuart Phelps and others Palmer traces the use of the regional travel accident motif and how local color writers employed it to give critiques on class society and modern life Exploring the themes of regional identity modernity and interpersonal relationships Together by Accident offers an intriguing evaluation of the innovations and inconveniences associated with life during the industrializing Gilded Age in America The Chicago Banker ,1900 Realist Ecstasy Lindsay V.
