Ocular Blood Flow:

Ocular Blood Flow Hedwig J. Kaiser, Josef Flammer, Phillip Hendrickson, 1996-01-01 This book is a synopsis of up to date knowledge on the quantification of ocular blood perfusion and originates from expert lectures held at the 1995 Glaucoma Meeting in Switzerland In the first section a profound overview of the anatomy physiology and pathophysiology of ocular perfusion enables the reader to gain distinct new insights into the pathogenesis of ocular diseases The second part of the publication describes the different measuring methods that are currently applied in clinical practice and in research It has been written by a team of leading researchers with the aim of bringing their findings to the attention of those working directly with patients in particular the ophthalmologist in the clinic or private practice The Ocular Circulation Jeffrey W. Kiel, 2011-02-01 This presentation describes the unique anatomy and physiology of the vascular beds that serve the eye The needs for an unobstructed light path from the cornea to the retina and a relatively fixed corneal curvature and distance between refractive structures pose significant challenges for the vasculature to provide nutrients and remove metabolic waste To meet these needs the ocular vascular beds are confined to the periphery of the posterior two thirds of the eye and a surrogate circulation provides a continuous flow of aqueous humor to nourish the avascular cornea lens and vitreous compartment The production of aqueous humor and its ease of egress from the eye also generates the intraocular pressure IOP which maintains the shape of the eye However the IOP also exerts a compressing force on the ocular blood vessels that is higher than elsewhere in the body This is particularly true for the intraocular veins which must have a pressure higher than IOP to remain patent and so the IOP is the effective venous pressure for the intraocular vascular beds Consequently the ocular circulation operates at a lower perfusion pressure gradient than elsewhere in the body and is more at risk for ischemic damage when faced with low arterial pressure particularly if IOP is elevated This risk and the specialized tissues of the eye give rise to the fascinating physiology of the ocular circulations Ocular Blood Flow in Glaucoma Robert N.

Weinreb, Alon Harris, 2009 This is the sixth World Glaucoma Association Consensus The relationship between ocular blood flow and glaucoma has been discussed for more than a century and still it uniformly fuels debates at glaucoma meetings throughout the world Clearly the results of this report will have broad and significant impact on glaucoma research and clinical practice The global faculty consisting of leading authorities on the scientific and clinical aspects of ocular blood flow have met in Fort Lauderdale on May 2 2009 to discuss the reports and refine the consensus statements Ocular Blood

Ocular Blood Flow and Glaucomatous Optic Neuropathy Maneli Mozaffarieh, Josef Flammer, 2009-03-31 It has been suspected since more than a century that disturbed ocular blood flow OBF may play a role in the pathogenesis of glaucoma Reduced OBF has been measured in glaucoma patients by numberless centres with different techniques in different tissues of the eye And reduced OBF has been proven to be of prognostic value Nevertheless the implementation of this knowledge into clinical practice has been very slow This practical book will help many ophthalmologists to better understand glaucoma The reading of this book will not only improve patient care but also give the reader intellectual satisfaction
