Emotion, Cognition, Health, and Development in Children and Adolescents (PLE: Emotion) Elizabeth J. Susman, Lynne V. Feagans, William J. Ray, 2014-11-20 Originally published in 1992, this title came out of a conference on emotion and cognition as antecedents and consequences of health and disease processes in children and adolescents. The theoretical rationale for the conference was based on the assumption that the development of emotion, cognition, health, and illness are processes that influence each other through the lifespan and that these reciprocal interactions begin in infancy. The chapters discuss developmental theories, research, and implications for interventions as they relate to promoting health, preventing disease, and treating illness in children and adolescents.

Parenting and the Child's World John G. Borkowski, Sharon Landesman Ramey, Marie Bristol-Power, 2001-10-01 Stimulated by the publication of The Nurture Assumption by Judith Rich Harris, Parenting and the Child's World was conceived around the notion that there are multiple sources of influence on children's development, including parenting behavior, family resources, genetic and other biological factors, as well as social influences from peers, teachers, and the community at large. The text's 39 contributors search for when, where, and how parenting matters and the major antecedents and moderators of effective parenting. The chapters focus on the major conceptual issues and empirical approaches that underlie our understanding of the importance of parenting for child development in academic, socio-emotional, and risk-taking domains. Additional goals are to show how culture and parenting are interwoven to chart future research directions and to help parents and professionals understand the implications of major research findings.
