

BREAD BAG AND MARMITE

The marmite was made up of a pair of plates and a pot. The first part was used to store the food in the pot. The outside was painted black green, and the inside was painted black. It was carried around in the bread bag or held under the nearest pack strap.

There were two smaller bags carried on the top of the bread bag that contained the marmite and the butter. These bags were carried hanging from the belt, although it could also be carried around the shoulder. In this photo it had an auxiliary strap which would be adjusted for weight of the marmite in the bag (10 lb. 10 oz.).
