

BOOK REVIEWS

QUANTITATIVE NUCLEAR CARDIOGRAPHY. Edited by Richard N. Pierson Jr., Joseph P. Kriss, Robert H. Jones and William McIntyre. pp. 289. Chichester: John Wiley & Sons, £12.00.

Primarily intended for the specialist this book gives a good, comprehensive survey in depth of recent advances in non-invasive radioisotope cardiography. By its very nature, in that it is intended for specialists in cardiology, nuclear and computer medicine, and bio-engineering, the precise and detailed information given can be best utilized only by those with the knowledge of, and access to, highly complicated and expensive equipment in situations where interdisciplinary rapport and back-up is available. It is therefore probably of little interest to the general physician.

Most of the chapters describing the mathematical approach to the quantitative techniques employed, and the detailed analysis of dynamic measurements, are written in the peculiar 'mixed' jargon which exemplifies American scientific writing of late, e.g. "cross-talk contamination between compartments".

Thus the length of the discussion is in direct proportion to the amount of confusion it engenders. On the other hand, detailed descriptions of the imaging techniques employed, presentation of visual evidence of abnormality, and discussion on how best to employ the plethora of radio-pharmaceuticals involved, is more than adequate and redeems the book as a useful adjunct to any nuclear medicine library. M.A.M.

THE EYE IN GENERAL PRACTICE. B. C. R. S. Jackson. Seventh Edition. Pp. 174. Edinburgh: Churchill Livingstone. £5.00.

This splendid little book admirably fulfils the author's intention as expressed in the Preface, of helping General Practitioners to recognise and treat common eye diseases and to understand the reports on patients who have been referred to hospital.

It contains a mass of information succinctly expressed and very fully illustrated. It is very readable and can be thoroughly recommended for its declared purpose.

The Seventh edition contains a small number of textual revisions but is chiefly distinguished from the sixth by the price. M.G.W.

BASIC ANATOMY AND PHYSIOLOGY OF THE HUMAN BODY. J. Robert McCarty, Ph.D. Pp. 574. Chichester: John Wiley & Sons Ltd. £7.90.

Students entering the 'Professions Supplementary to Medicine' will welcome this book in which the text is reduced to a minimum and replaced by concisely expressed chapters colourfully illustrated with clear, accurate diagrams of outstanding artistic execution.

The author sets out to educate the student in the basic concepts of Anatomy and Physiology in a manner which stimulates wider reading and gives the reader the confidence that comes on gaining an understanding of the basic 'need to know' essentials of the subject. Each chapter is laid out in an objective format which skillfully interrelates photographs, text and diagrams thus avoiding the irritating necessity of marking the paragraph to seek further explanation in another chapter. 'Summaries and self test questions' permit the reader to progress at his own pace. Useful 'end of chapter' references encourage research and a comprehensive glossary giving definitions, derivations and pronunciations, provide valuable assistance to the student encountering anatomical terms for the first time. Frequent use of algorithms ensure a sound grasp of the underlying patterns of thought in the physiological presentations.

Physiology does appear however to be covered in greater depth than Anatomy which could well be expanded by additional Kinesiology.

Despite the obvious differences in the standard knowledge between the two subjects, this book should make a valuable contribution to a school library, providing a reference for the student and assisting the tutor in the preparation of visual aids for the classroom. G.J.

THE FABER MEDICAL DICTIONARY. Edited by Sir Cecil Wakeley, Bt. Second edition revised by J. G. Bate. Pp. 483. London: Faber & Faber. £6.95.

This is an excellent medical dictionary which is well laid out for quick reference and has an easy to follow guide to pronunciation. I like it because of its size which is halfway between a library and briefcase edition. Having said that, I think it is quite reasonable to say, because of its size there must be many omissions and it was perhaps unfortunate that the first word I needed to check after receiving the book was 'myotubohemeral' (both daily and nightly), which I could not find.

This dictionary can be recommended to those in any way connected with medicine but especially those in the para medical field. It is just the right size to keep on the desk but rather too bulky for carrying around in a briefcase. J.R.

TRYPANOSOMIASIS AND LEISHMANIASIS with special reference to Chagas Disease. Ciba Foundation Symposium 20 (new series). Pp. 353. Elsevier. Excerpta Medica. North-Holland. $17.70.

This Ciba Foundation Symposium is a splendid report of what reads almost like a family meeting. Each participant is an expert in his field and many of the reported discussions are clearly sequels to many previous happy meetings.

It has little to give those who have not studied the
