Taylor, Elizabeth J. Van Every, 1993-01-01 In this challenging book James R Taylor and Elizabeth J Van Every argue that partly as a result of the introduction of information and communications technology into the workplace the nature and authority of the traditional bureaucratic form of organization is being called into question While not espousing technological determinism they contend that developments in telecommunications and computer software constitute at one and the same time a globalization and a fragmentation of organizational communications These trends transcend the bounds of bureaucratic lines of control and integration and presage the emergence of new organizational forms Suggesting that existing models of the organization as a rational machine are no longer adequate to explain or to cope with the complexity of the organizational changes taut are occurring in an information economy Taylor and Van Every outline a communication based alternative Their approach explores the technology s impact on the transactional and symbolic dimensions of organization and its implications for radical re framing of management s own role The book touches on important issues in at least three major areas of research organizational theory informational technology and the information society Taylor and Van Every s interdisciplinary synthesis focuses attention on the fundamental nature of modern organizations from a unique communicational perspective Taylor and Van Every identify problems which are having and will continue to have a significant impact on business governance and society Managing Strategy Processes in Emergent Industries Johan Roos, Georg von Krogh, 2016-07-27 This book highlights the challenges for firms operating in industries where traditional boundaries are vanishing and a totally new business landscape unfolds This puts significant demand on the top management teams and their ability to perceive and interpret phenomena and patterns emerging that may influence strategy Based upon observation of and involvement in the strategy processes of three media firms a framework for strategy processes is proposed and a practical outline of how new strategy processes should be developed is presented
