Quality geriatric care as perceived by nurses in long-term and acute care settings

Beth Ellen Barba, Jie Hu and Jimmy Efid

Aims and objectives. This study focused on differences in nurses' satisfaction with the quality of care of older people and with organisational characteristics and work environment in acute care and long-term care settings.

Background. Numerous studies have explored links between nurses' satisfaction with care and work environments on the one hand and a variety of physical, behavioural and psychological reactions of nurses on the other. One key to keeping nurses in the workplace is a better understanding of nurses' satisfaction with the quality of care they provide.

Design. Descriptive design.

Method. The self-selected sample included 298 registered nurses and licensed practical nurses who provide care to minority, underserved and disadvantaged older populations in 89 long-term care and <100 bed hospitals in 38 rural counties and eight metropolitan areas in a Southern state. All completed the Agency Geriatric Nursing Care survey, which consisted of a 13-item scale measuring nurses' satisfaction with the quality of geriatric care in their practice settings and an 11-item scale examining obstacles to providing quality geriatric care. Demographic variables were compared with chi-square. Independent t-tests were used to examine differences between nurses in long-term care and acute care settings.

Results. Significant differences were found in level of satisfaction and perceived obstacles to providing quality care to older adults between participants from acute and long-term care. Participants in long-term care had greater satisfaction with the quality of geriatric care than those in acute facilities.

Conclusions. Nurses in long-term care were more satisfied that care was evidence-based; specialised to individual needs of older adults; promoted autonomy and independence of elders; and was continuous across settings. Participants in acute facilities perceived more obstacles to providing quality geriatric care than nurses in long-term care facilities.

Relevance to clinical practice. Modification of hospital geriatric practice environments and leadership commitment to evidence-based practice guidelines that promote autonomy and independence of patients and staff could improve acute care nurses' perceptions of quality of geriatric care.

Key words: assessment, geriatric, licensed practical nurse, nurse's perception of satisfaction, quality care, registered nurse.

Quality Care In Geriatric Settings:

Quality Care in Geriatric Settings Paul Richard Katz, 1995 Current issues related to ethics and quality of life in Long Term Care are discussed in this volume Quality care for elderly people Edward J. Dickinson, Peter P. Mayer, Martin

Sandler, 2013-11-11 This book is all about improving the health care of elderly people which is facing unprecedented challenges in the 1990s. Efforts need to be concentrated in three main areas: the development of high quality care in community settings, the future role of specialized hospital services, and the way that long term care is delivered. All of these are interconnected and success with any of them depends on successful relationships. For example, success in community care requires working interfaces with primary care, the private sector, and hospital care. These interfaces are not static but comprise dynamic interactions between people in different teams with different backgrounds, training, perspectives, and interests. What people do is influenced strongly by the organizations they work for. These inescapable facts lead us to the structure of this book. By concentrating on sectors, people, and organizations, we hope to deal with all the important relationships in a coherent way. Yet this book is not intended to be from a service providers' perspective. We have arranged the book in this way so that providers are best equipped to meet the needs of their customers, whether they are patients, residents, or clients. We know that elderly people may experience dislocation in their care because of frictions and gaps between different sectors, disciplines, teams, and organizations. To achieve seamless care, there is a need for greater understanding and harmony of purpose and action across the care spectrum. Evidence-Based Geriatric Nursing Protocols for Best Practice Marie Boltz, Marie P. Boltz, Elizabeth Capezuti, Terry T. Fulmer, 2024-09-26 Praise for previous editions: The evidence-based protocols are designed as a primary reference and are useful, substantive, and timely. The broader contributions of useful format and succinct review of the evidence make it likely that this text will continue to be the leading resource in nursing education and practice. The Gerontologist: As a gerontological clinical educator/research nurse, I will often use this as a reference. The format and the content are good, and the explanations of how to best use the evidence simplify the process of sifting through mountains of information to figure the best practice. Score 97. Doodys: The result of a collaboration between expert practitioners and educators in geriatric nursing, the seventh edition of this acclaimed reference has been updated and revised with new information on chronic conditions and emerging models of care presented in 10 completely new chapters. It provides the most current evidence-based protocols for improving both quality of care and patient outcomes when caring for older adults in multiple disciplines and settings. As in past editions, the seventh edition is distinguished by its use of a rigorous systematic method, AGREE Appraisal of Guidelines for Research and Evaluation, to improve the validity of the book's evidence-based content. Chapters provide assessment and management principles, clinical interventions, and information on specialty practice and models of care. Included in most chapters are protocols developed for each clinical condition by experts in that specific area. Evidence is current and derived from all settings of care, including community, primary, acute, and long-term care.

Protocols include an overview and evidence based assessment and intervention strategies Illustrative case studies with discussion are presented in most chapters along with chapter objectives and references with evidence ratings Instructor s resources include an AACN Mapping Grid Course Cartridge Transition Guide PowerPoints and Test Bank New to the Seventh Edition Updated to encompass the latest trends in older adult care chronic conditions and emerging models of care New chapters on care and management of diabetes and respiratory care New chapters on issues surrounding nutrition and dementia and mental illness New chapter on care and comfort at the end of life New chapters on adopting principles of diversity equity and inclusion and an age friendly health system into practice New chapters on models of care in long term community based and primary care Key Features Delivers easy to follow geriatric protocols for best practices Updates evidence regularly to reflect current practice standards Encompasses a broad scope of content including detailed information rarely covered in professional literature Offers case studies and discussions to illustrate application of protocol to practice Written by renowned leaders in geriatric nursing education and practice Use of AGREE Appraisal of Guidelines for Research and Evaluation to improve the validity of evidence throughout the text The Future of Long-Term Care Robert H. Practical Geriatric Assessment Howard Fillit, Gloria Picariello, 1998 Geriatric assessment is an integral part of geriatric care throughout the world The frail elderly often have multiple chronic illnesses functional disabilities and psychosocial problems their needs therefore extending far beyond the treatment of a single medical condition Comprehensive assessment of such patients requires a multidisciplinary team approach and the use of an organized efficient set of guidelines and procedures with which to identify and address potentially reversible problems The ultimate goal is then to systematically restore and maintain the functions essential to preserve quality of life Practical Geriatric Assessment is structured for ease of quick reference The background to each application of geriatric assessment is given first and this is then placed in its practical context thus providing an essential guide to the principles and methods of effective geriatric assessment
