s plenary panels we decided to publish them in three separate volumes viewing crime from the street level addressing school violence through research based policy developed through an interdisciplinary approach and understanding the involvement of women and girls in the criminal justice system Sudhir Venkatesh and Richard Curtis bring the ethnographer s perspective to the analysis of street crime analyzing respectively the financial activity of gangs and recent trends in drug dealing Their method distinct from that of conventional quantitative social science calls for intensive observation over long periods and involves the quest for what is a iv specific to single places and times and what is generalizable The close up street level observations of study subjects offer singular insights for practitioners who deal with these individuals as offenders In this panel we also benefited from the perspective of Charles Ramsey Chief of the Metropolitan Police Department Washington D C His indication that drug trafficking and gang crime persist in his jurisdiction despite the overall drop in crime offers proof of the ethnographer s caution against facile generalization This year marks the first time the program offices of the Office of Justice Programs OJP the Corrections Program Office the Drug Courts Program Office the Executive Office for Weed and Seed and the Violence Against Women Office have joined the OJP bureaus as conference sponsors Because these offices work so closely with the practitioner community I feel their sponsorship is an added expression of their commitment to research I think they would endorse Chief Ramsey s succinct assessment of the role of research in affecting crime levels in the years to come as bringing to light findings useful for fashioning real world solutions The best way to predict the future the Chief said is to help create it Those who wish to read more can find abstracts of the conference sessions on the World Wide Web at <http://www.ilj.org> Jeremy Travis Director National Institute of Justice
