Premises Werner Hamacher, 1996 Poetry does not impose it exposes itself wrote Paul Celan Werner Hamacher's investigations into crucial texts of philosophical and literary modernity show that Celan's apothegm is also valid for the structure of understanding and for language in general Subject position is widely invoked today yet Hamacher is the first to thoroughly investigate the premises for this invocation He demonstrates that the promise of a subject position is not only unavoidable and thus produces more and more fundamentalisms but is also unattainable and therefore always open to innovation revision and unexpected transformation In a book that is both philosophical and literary Hamacher gives us the fullest account of the vast disruption in the very nature of our understanding that was first unleashed by Kant's critique of human subjectivity In light of the double nature of every premise that it is promised but never attainable Hamacher gives us nine decisive themes topics and texts of modernity the hermeneutic circle in Schleiermacher and Heidegger the structure of ethical commands in Kant Nietzsche's genealogy of moral terms and his exploration of the aporias of singularity the irony of reading in de Man the parabasis of language in Schlegel Kleist's disruption of narrative representation the gesture of naming in Benjamin and Kafka and the incisive caesura that Paul Celan inserts into temporal and linguistic reversals There is no book that so fully brings the issues of both critical philosophy and critical literature into reach

Sri Lanka and the Responsibility to Protect Damien Kingsbury, 2012-03-12 This book provides a study of the war by Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam LTTE to create a separate state in Sri Lanka It examines the ways in which this war should in principle have invoked Responsibility to Protect principles as well as the political legal and practical problems involved and ultimately why the international community failed to act Over the years there have been several events including those in Rwanda Sierra Leone Timor Leste Darfur and Kosovo that have led the international community to accept a responsibility to protect However despite its overwhelming preliminary endorsement the principles of this concept are still not universally sanctioned and there are some strong international opponents including some countries that were initial signatories of the convention By considering the example of Sri Lanka the text focuses on what conditions could satisfy or demand the application of responsibility to protect It further presents a case as to why this conflict was and may still be the normative responsibility of the international community Sri Lanka and the Responsibility to Protect will be of great interest to students of South East Asian politics human rights international law ethnic conflict security studies and IR in general

Doing Critical Management Research Mats Alvesson,Stanley Deetz,1999-09-30 Alvesson and Deetz rehearse the arguments against neo positivism and quantitative research very effectively also make the important distinction between qualitative work in general and critical qualitative work in particular The arguments here feel fresh and engaged helped along by numerous illustrations and examples from particular research studies a welcome antidote to the majority of methodology books especially in a climate where research especially at doctoral level is increasingly prone to standardization The value of the book in this regard cannot be overestimated because it draws together insights and arguments expect it to be widely read and cited and to remain the standard text on critical management research practice for a good many years to come This is an excellent text which combines a very impressive coverage of the literature while showing great care and thought in exposition

The objective of Arab Criminology is to establish a criminological subfield called Arab Criminology The ever evolving field of criminology has advanced in the past decade yet many impediments remain Unlike criminology in Africa Asia the Americas Europe and Oceania which is based merely on geopolitical constructs the Arab world has unique commonalities that do not exist in the other established subfields of criminology The Arab world has largely remained in criminology's periphery despite the region's considerable importance to current international affairs In response this book explores two main questions Why should we and how do we establish a subfield in Arab criminology The authors examine the state of criminology in the Arab world define its parameters and present four components that bond and distinguish Arab criminology from other criminological area studies They then identify the requirements for establishing Arab criminology and detail how local regional and international researchers can collaborate develop and expand the subfield Arab criminology will challenge some of the recurrent Orientalist and Islamophobic tropes in Northern criminology and progress the discipline of criminology to reflect a more diverse focus that embraces regions from the Global South Presenting compelling arguments and examples that support the establishment of this subfield Arab Criminology will be of great interest to scholars of criminology criminal justice legal studies and Middle Eastern North African studies particularly those working on Southern criminology comparative criminology international criminal justice systems and Arab studies
