developed organisationally and institutionally seems very fragile An imperative exists to recover whatever systemic sensibilities we still retain to foster systems literacy and to invest in systems thinking in practice capability This will be needed in future at personal group community regional national and international levels all at the same time Systems Practice How to Act is structured into four parts Part I introduces the societal need to invest in systems thinking in practice in contexts of uncertainty and complexity epitomised by the challenges of responding to human induced climate change Part II unpacks what is involved in systems practice by means of a juggler isophor examining situations where systems thinking offers useful understanding and opportunities for change Part III identifies the main factors that constrain the uptake of systems practice and makes the case for innovation in practice by means of systemic inquiry systemic action research and systemic intervention The book concludes with Part IV which critically examines how systems practice is or might be utilised at different levels from the personal to the societal div      Clinical Practice at the Edge of Care Laura Smith,2016-12-07 This book brings together psychological and psychotherapeutic contributions in clinical practice with at risk children and their families Chapters by experts working in a range of edge of care settings give an essential account of real world clinical challenges and dilemmas whilst drawing on relevant theory and the growing evidence base for edge of care work with children and families This title will be of interest to both clinical and social work practitioners those commissioning and developing best practice in edge of care services scholars and students of Clinical Psychology Systemic Psychotherapy and related disciplines      Advancing Relational Leadership Research Mary Uhl-Bien,Sonia M. Ospina,2012-10-01 Leaders and followers live in a relational world a world in which leadership occurs in complex webs of relationships and dynamically changing contexts Despite this our theories of leadership are grounded in assumptions of individuality and linear causality If we are to advance understandings of leadership that have more relevance to the world of practice we need to embed issues of relationality into leadership studies This volume addresses this issue by bringing together for the first time a set of prominent scholars from different paradigmatic and disciplinary perspectives to engage in dialogue regarding how to meet the challenges of relationality in leadership research and practice Included are cutting edge thinking heated debate and passionate perspectives on the issues at hand The chapters reveal the varied and nuanced treatments of relationality that come from authors alternative paradigmatic entity constructionist critical views Dialogue scholars reacting to the chapters engage in spirited debate regarding the commensurability or incommensurability of the paradigmatic approaches The editors bring the dialogue together with introductory and concluding chapters that offer a framework for comparing and situating the competing assumptions and perspectives spanning the relational leadership landscape Using paradigm interplay they unpack assumptions and lay out a roadmap for relational leadership research A key takeaway is that advancing relational leadership research requires multiple paradigmatic perspectives and scholars who are conversant in the assumptions brought by these perspectives The book is aimed at those who feel that much of current leadership thinking is missing the boat in today's complex relational world. It provides an essential resource for all leadership scholars and practitioners curious about the nature of research on leadership, both those with much research exposure and those new to the field.
