High-Redshift Galaxies Immo Appenzeller, 2009-06-17 The high redshift galaxies became a distinct research field during the final decade of the 20th century. At that time the Lyman break technique made it possible to identify significant samples of such objects and the new generation of 8 to 10 m telescopes resulted in the first good spectroscopic data. Today the high redshift galaxies have developed into one of the important topics of astrophysics accounting for about 5-10% of the publications in the major scientific journals devoted to astronomy. Because high redshift galaxies is a rapidly developing field and since new results are published constantly writing a book on this topic is challenging. On the other hand in view of the large amount of individual results now in the literature and in view of the still growing interest in this topic it appears worthwhile to summarize and evaluate the available data and to provide an introduction for those who wish to enter this field or who for various reasons might be interested in its results. The end of the first decade of the 21st century appears to be a good point in time to attempt such a summary. The current generation of ground based 8 to 10 m optical telescopes the Hubble Space Telescope and the most important large radio telescopes have by now been in operation since about one or two decades. Although these instruments will continue to produce important scientific results for some time to come many of the initial programs exploiting their unique new possibilities have been completed.

Asian Diaspora Poetry in North America Benzi Zhang, 2007-12-12 Presenting a new way of reading that helps us discern some previously unnoticed or unnoticeable features of Asian diaspora poetry this volume highlights how poetry plays a significant role in mediating and defining cross cultural and transnational positions. Asian diaspora poetry in North America is a rich body of poetic works that not only provide valuable material for us to understand the lives and experiences of Asian diasporas but also present us with an opportunity to examine some of the most important issues in current literary and cultural studies. As a mode of writing across cultural and national borders these poetic works challenge us to reconsider the assumptions and meanings of identity, nation, home and place in a broad cross cultural context. In recent postcolonial studies diaspora has been conceived not only as a process of migration in which people crossed and traversed the borders of different countries but also as a double relationship between different cultural origins. With all its complexity and ambiguity associated with the experience of multi cultural mediation diaspora as both a process and a relationship suggests an act of constant repositioning in confluent streams that accommodate to multiple cultural traditions. By examining how Asian diaspora poets maintain and represent their cultural differences in North America Zhang is able to seek new perspectives for understanding and analyzing the intrinsic values of Asian cultures that survive and develop persistently in North American societies.
