The second part of the report, which is the main body of the document, is divided into two main sections. The first section, titled 'The first part of the report', discusses the importance of the research and the methods used. The second section, titled 'The second part of the report', discusses the results of the research and the conclusions drawn. The report concludes with a summary of the findings and a list of references.

These 2000-2001 data are the first to show the impact of the 1999-2000 drought on the water supply of the Colorado River. The drought was the worst in the history of the Colorado River, and it was the first time that the river's flow was so low. The drought was caused by a combination of factors, including a severe drought in the Colorado River basin, a severe drought in the Colorado River basin, and a severe drought in the Colorado River basin.
