Methodological Advances In Cross National Surveys Of Education Achievement:

Methodological Advances in Cross-National Surveys of Educational Achievement National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Center for Education, Board on Testing and Assessment, Board on International Comparative Studies in Education, 2002-06-14 In November 2000 the Board on International Comparative Studies in Education BICSE held a symposium to draw on the wealth of experience gathered over a four decade period to evaluate improvement in the quality of the methodologies used in international studies and to identify the most pressing methodological issues that remain to be solved Since 1960 the United States has participated in 15 large scale cross national education surveys The most assessed subjects have been science and mathematics through reading comprehension geography nonverbal reasoning literature French English as a foreign language civic education history computers in education primary education and second language acquisition The papers prepared for this symposium and discussions of those papers make up the volume representing the most up to date and comprehensive assessment of methodological strengths and weaknesses of international comparative studies of student achievement These papers answer the following questions 1 What is the methodological quality of the most recent international surveys of student achievement How authoritative are the results 2 Has the methodological quality of international achievement studies improved over the past 40 years and 3 What are promising opportunities for future improvement Brookings Papers on Education Policy: 2003

Diane Ravitch, 2010-12-01 In 1983 the seminal report issued by the National Commission on Excellence in Education A Nation at Risk charged that most American high schoolers were following a general course of instruction choosing neither the college preparatory track nor the vocational option This pattern the report complained had fostered low expectations and a curricular hodge podge of classes that failed to prepare students for college or work The commission called on states to implement academic requirements for all students regardless of background including four years of English and three years each of science mathematics and social studies Students should not be sorted by their presumed future destinations the commission reasoned but should be offered an equal opportunity to get a high quality education to fit them either for postsecondary education or the modern workplace Two decades after the commission called on states to reform the high school environment and raise graduation requirements the Brown Center on Education Policy at the Brookings Institution convened a group of prominent scholars to explore the current state of America's high schools focusing on new research about reforming these institutions that are so important in the lives of the nation's adolescents The questions considered reflected the diversity of the participants and covered a variety of areas historical international sociological and practical Data gathered by the U S Department of Education show students today are taking many more advanced courses in mathematics and the sciences while at the same time test scores do not reflect the increases in enrollments in academic courses In addition large score gaps remain among students from different social groups Reform of the high schools must take into account the elementary and middle schools that prepare students and the postsecondary institutions to which students aspire Adolescent culture and students views about school and academic work play important roles in student achievement as do the family and contemporary society in shaping of adolescent behavior No matter their background all participants agreed that the key to a successful high school rests with the extent to which it recognizes and strengthens its commitment to the intellectual growth of its students

US educational achievement on international assessments

Ben Dalton,2011-05-23 The debate about the performance of US students on international assessments of educational achievement routinely fails to account for one consistently stark result US achievement is bifurcated between a group of high performing Asian and white students and an exceptionally low performing group of black and Hispanic students By summarizing results across 20 major international tests conducted since 1995 this research paper shows that when US racial and ethnic groups are separately compared with other countries Asian and white students regularly perform at or near the top of international rankings while black and Hispanic students typically rank at or near the bottom Furthermore the United States has a substantially larger minority population than all other developed countries and minority status is not synonymous with internationally comparable factors such as socioeconomic level or immigrant status The fact that overall US scores are disproportionately influenced by race and ethnicity suggests that researchers and reformers must reconsider how they use and interpret the results of international achievement tests The research paper recommends providing and analyzing cross national data separately by ethnic groups to inform approaches to improving education for all students

Rodriguez,Wendy M. Smith,Mark D. Reckase,Kiril Bankov,2018-08-16 This book uses the publicly available TEDS M data to answer such questions as How does teacher education contribute to the learning outcomes of future teachers Are there programs that are more successful than others in helping teachers learn to teach mathematics How does the local and national policy environment contribute to teacher education outcomes It invites readers to explore these questions across a large number of international settings The importance of preparing future mathematics teachers has become a priority across many nations Across the globe nations have allocated resources and expertise to this endeavour Yet in spite of the importance accorded to teacher education not much is known about different approaches to preparing knowledgeable teachers and whether these approaches do in fact achieve their purpose The Mathematics Teacher Education and Development Study TEDS M is the first and to date the only cross national study using scientific and representative samples to provide empirical data on the knowledge that future mathematics teachers of primary and secondary school acquire in their teacher education programs The study addresses the central importance of teacher knowledge in learning to teach mathematics by examining variation in the nature and influence of teacher education programs within and across countries The study collected data on teacher education programs structure curriculum and opportunities to learn on teacher educators characteristics and beliefs and on future mathematics teachers individual characteristics beliefs and mathematics and pedagogical knowledge across 17 countries providing a unique opportunity to explore enduring questions in the field Schooling Across the Globe William H. Schmidt, Richard T. Houang, Leland S. Cogan, Michelle L. Solorio, 2018-11-22 This research examines 17 international assessments over 60 years highlighting the critical role that schooling plays around the world PISA 2006 Technical Report OECD, 2009-01-19 The PISA 2006 Technical Report describes the methodology underlying the PISA 2006 survey It examines features related to the implementation of the project at a level of detail that allows researchers to replicate its analyses Effective and Equitable Teacher Practice in Mathematics and Science Education Nani Teig, Trude Nilsen, Kajsa Yang Hansen, 2024-03-19 This open access book presents original research on effective and equitable teacher practice in mathematics and science education across Nordic countries It focuses on three key aspects of teacher practice what teachers teach how teachers teach and how teachers assess their students To provide a comprehensive understanding of teacher practice data from the IEA's Trends in Mathematics and Science Study TIMSS from 2011 to 2019 was analyzed TIMSS provides large scale and representative data allowing an in depth investigation of the relations between teachers their practices and student outcomes The findings highlight the changes in teacher practice over time and the extent to which such changes explain the differences in student outcomes This research also contributes to understanding how the relationships between teacher practice and student outcomes vary across different student groups i e gender socioeconomic status and language background The empirical evidence presented not only adds a significant layer to the academic discourse but also offers practical implications These insights are crucial in facilitating educational policymaking and classroom practices aimed at improving student outcomes and closing gaps in educational inequality Preparing for Life in a Digital World Julian Fraillon, John Ainley, Wolfram Schulz, Tim Friedman, Daniel Duckworth, 2020-02-13 This Open Access book summarizes the key findings from the second cycle of IEA's International Computer and Information Literacy Study ICILS conducted in 2018 ICILS seeks to establish how well schools around the globe are responding to the need to provide young people with the necessary digital participatory competencies Effective use of information and communication technologies ICT is an imperative for successful participation in an increasingly digital world ICILS 2018 explores international differences in students computer and information literacy CIL namely their ability to use computers to investigate create and communicate at home at school in the workplace and in the community Participating countries also had an option to administer an assessment of students computational thinking CT focused on their ability to recognize aspects of real world problems appropriate for computational formulation and to evaluate and develop algorithmic solutions to those problems so that the solutions could be operationalized with a computer

The data collected by ICILS 2018 show how digital competencies can be assessed using instruments representing authentic contexts for ICT use and how students CIL and CT skills relate to school learning experiences out of school contexts and student characteristics Those data also show how learning technologies are used in classrooms around the world Background questionnaires asked students about their use of ICT and collected information from teachers schools and national education systems about the resourcing and teaching of CIL and CT within their countries The results of ICILS 2018 will enable policymakers and education systems to develop a better understanding of the contexts and outcomes of CIL and CT education programs

Re-Evaluating Education in Japan and Korea Hyunjoon Park, 2013-07-18 International comparisons of student achievement in mathematics science and reading have consistently shown that Japanese and Korean students outperform their peers in other parts of world Understandably this has attracted many policymakers and researchers seeking to emulate this success but it has also attracted strong criticism and a range of misconceptions of the Japanese and Korean education system Directly challenging these misconceptions which are prevalent in both academic and public discourses this book seeks to provide a more nuanced view of the Japanese and Korean education systems This includes the idea that the highly standardized means of education makes outstanding students mediocre that the emphasis on memorization leads to a lack of creativity and independent thinking that students successes are a result of private supplementary education and that the Japanese and Korean education systems are homogenous to the point of being one single system Using empirical data Hyunjoon Park re evaluates the strengths and weaknesses of the existing education systems in Japan and Korea and reveals whether the issues detailed above are real or unfounded and misinformed Offering a balanced view of the evolving and complex nature of academic achievement among Japanese and Korean students this book will appeal to students and scholars of Asian international and comparative education as well as those interested in Asian society more broadly
