Olinger, 2016 Choosing the Good Portion tells the story of the OPC through profiles of more than 90 women who sacrificed and served during the last 80 years to help mold the OPC into what it is today The stories feature missionary wives pastors wives the spouses of seminary professors single women those who contributed financially or behind the scenes to their congregations or denomination those who helped to start churches taught VBS ministered to different cultures struggled in their faith offered hospitality lost a husband or child and those who were in danger or died By sharing the stories of these ordinary women we hope to encourage the next generation of OPC women in their service Can the Orthodox Presbyterian Church Be Saved? John William Robbins, 2004 The Orthodox Presbyterian Church was founded in 1936 by about 135 people who were offended by the lack of discipline in and doctrinal errors of the Presbyterian Church in the USA The purpose of the OPC was to be a spiritual successor to the PCUSA which had abandoned the Westminster Confession of Faith even though it still affirmed the Confession as its official statement of faith But early in its history the OPC fell under the influence of an agnostic view of propositional revelation emanating from Westminster Seminary a view that said that there is no identity of content between the Christian system of theology meaning Reformed confessions of faith and the divine system of theology known only to God This agnosticism has now brought the OPC to the point of falling Like its predecessor the PCUSA the OPC has failed to discipline teachers who teach contrary to Scriptures and the Confession of Faith and it has endorsed un Biblical teaching about Scripture and the Gospel Can the OPC Be Saved is designed to inform members of the OPC of events and doctrines about which the OPC leadership has not been forthright Publisher description What is the OPC? , 1993 Orthodox Presbyterian Church, 1936-1986 Charles G.
