Public Broadcasting And The Public Trust:

Public Broadcasting and the Public Trust Center for the Study of Popular Culture, 1995 Details with in depth reports why conservatives in Congress are so angry about PBS and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting Includes a record of Public Broadcasting s resistance to change including an attempt made by Congress in the Telecommunications Act of 1992 to induce PBS to reform itself Must reading for anyone who believes that Masterpiece Theater and Sesame Street represent the majority of the types of programming that PBS funds and supports and who thinks that the new Republicans in Congress are raising a fuss over nothing Composed of articles from the journal COMINT published by the Center for the Study of Popular Culture the only journal addressing public broadcasting from a conservative perspective This book is the only critical account of PBS that has been published in that institution s entire 28 year history

Congress. House. Committee on Commerce. Subcommittee on Telecommunications, Trade, and Consumer Protection,1999 Producing Public Television, Producing Public Culture Barry Dornfeld,2021-02-09 From 1989 to 1991 Barry Dornfeld had an unusual double role on the crew of the major PBS documentary series Childhood As a researcher for the series he investigated the relationship between children and media As an anthropologist however his subject was the television production process itself examining for example how producers developed the series negotiated with their academic advisors and shaped footage shot around the world into seven programs. He presents the results of his fieldwork in this groundbreaking study, one of the first to take an ethnographic approach to the production of a television show as opposed to its reception. Dornfeld begins with a broad discussion of public television's role in American culture and goes on to examine documentaries as a form of popular anthropology. Drawing on his observations of Childhood, he considers the documentary form as a kind of imagining in which both producers and viewers construct understandings of themselves and others, revealing their conceptions of culture and history and their ideologies of cultural difference and universality. He argues that producers of culture should also be understood as consumers who conduct their work through an active envisioning of the audience. Dornfeld explores as well how intellectual media professionals struggle with the institutional and cultural forces surrounding television that promote entertainment at the expense of education. The book provides a rare glimpse behind the scenes of a major documentary and demonstrates the value of an ethnographic approach to the study of media production.
