Manuscript Recipe Books as Archaeological Objects Madeline Shanahan, 2014-11-18 During the mid to late seventeenth century women in Irish houses from elite backgrounds started to collect recipes which they recorded in domestic manuscripts While these manuscripts were made elsewhere at an earlier date they were an almost entirely new arrival to Ireland in this period and their sudden proliferation said much about changes taking place in society at large This book is a detailed study of such manuscripts from the perspective of historical archaeology which will argue that they are artifacts which clearly demonstrate that a profound series of changes was taking place The written word penetrated people s daily lives and homes to a degree that it had not in previous periods and it had a profound influence on how they related to their world objects and each other While this book will address how we can use them as sources for the study of food history and material culture it is ultimately concerned with the meanings of manuscript recipe books and specifically what they say about the individuals and society that made them The proliferation of these manuscripts signaled a profound change not just in cuisine but also in the way people thought about and related to food as a form of material culture Ultimately this book will argue that these manuscripts are not simply excellent records which can tell us about material culture within the early modern house but that they are a profoundly important type of artifact in their own right Undertaking research that situates textual objects such as recipe books at the very core of historical archaeology is critical to understanding some of the most significant changes that took place in the early modern world Image to Interpretation Melissa Terras, 2006-10-19 The ink and stylus tablets discovered at the Roman fort of Vindolanda are a unique resource for scholars of ancient history However the stylus tablets in particular are extremely difficult to read This book details the development of what appears to be the first system constructed to aid experts in the process of reading an ancient document exploring the extent to which techniques from Artificial Intelligence can be used to develop a system that could aid historians in reading the stylus texts Image to Interpretation includes a model of how experts read ancient texts a corpora of letter forms from the Vindolanda text corpus and a detailed description of the architecture of the system It will be of interest to papyrologists researchers in Roman history and palaeography computer and engineering scientists working in the field of Artificial Intelligence and image processing and those interested in the use of computing in the humanities Family Tree Detective Colin D. Rogers, 1997 Welcomed worldwide on its first publication this practical and lively guide for the amateur genealogist has now been fully revised and updated The new material includes a section on medieval genealogy which targets the increasing numbers of family historians who have reached back as far as the sixteenth century and wish to go further Heraldry is introduced for the first time There is detail on the location and genealogical content of military records and the records of Poor Law Unions and their workhouses Details are also included of the latest changes to the location and cost of civil registration sources A problem solving manual rather than a simple how to guide The family tree detective explains what to do when the usual methods fail and provides invaluable assistance for those without access to London's vast resources of genealogical information Sir Philip Sidney and the Circulation of Manuscripts, 1558-1640 H. R. Woudhuysen, 1996-05-23 This is the first modern study of the production and circulation of manuscripts during the English Renaissance H R Woudhuysen examines the relationship between manuscript and print looks at people who lived by their pens and surveys authorial and scribal manuscripts paying particular attention to the copying of verse plays and scholarly works by hand It investigates the professional production of manuscripts for sale by scribes such as Ralph Crane and Richard Robinson The second part of the book examines Sir Philip Sydney's works in the context of Woudhuysen's research discussing all Sidney's important manuscripts and seeking to assess his part in the circulation of his works and his role in the promotion of a scribal culture A detailed examination of the manuscripts and early prints of his poems his Arcadias and of Astrophil and Stella shed new light on their composition evolution and dissemination as well as on Sidney's friends and
