judgments of the past I had none if indeed I had any motive in undertaking this work it was to seek for political principles Thus far I have attained to scarcely more than one and this is so simple that will seem puerile and that I hardly dare express it Nevertheless I have adhered to it and in what the reader is about to peruse my judgments are all derived from that its truth is the measure of theirs It consists wholly in this observation that HUMAN SOCIETY ESPECIALLY A MODERN SOCIETY IS A VAST AND COMPLICATED THING Hence the difficulty in knowing and comprehending it For the same reason it is not easy to handle the subject well It follows that a cultivated mind is much better able to do this than an uncultivated mind and a man specially qualified than one who is not From these two last truths flow many other consequences which if the reader deigns to reflect on them he will have no trouble in defining The Origins of Contemporary France Hippolyte A.
