By Margaret Tolpe
World Staff Writer

Professor and consultant John Lambertson says sociology plays a big part in the wherewithals and dealings of the business world.

As an Oklahoma State University instructor, he teaches students how to see the everyday world in a sociological perspective. As a local business consultant, he tries to help people and companies improve through conversation and interaction.

"I worked with a woman who was hired as a representative of Williams Pipe Line Co.," Lambertson said. "She was a forestry expert. She knew all about trees and land and how they should be used, but she didn't know how to work with the residents."

"Her job was to talk to neighbors over a wetlands area to let them know what Williams was doing in the area. She told me she had no idea how to talk to the people."

With some coaching and a few phone calls to several people in regulatory positions, Lambertson came up with ideas on how to approach the residents, listen to their complaints and answer their needs.

As a result, Lambertson said, the Williams representative finished her work in record time.

"The cost of most business problems is usually attorney fees," he said. "That's because people don't have the skills needed to understand the needs of others."

"A prime example is the Superfund cleanup. The consultant costs have not been for the cleanup, but for time in court."

Lambertson's consulting usually starts with a meeting with executives to find out what the company needs. Sometimes he is hired to start a company's communications with another country, such as teaching executives how to dine with Japanese guests or how to approach manufacturing techniques with new businesses in Peru. Other times he may be hired to find easier ways for management to communicate with laborers rather than through complaints or suggestion boxes.

"My way is to go into a company, look around and then listen," he said. "There is one thing people love to talk about and they are all experts on — themselves. If you can get a person to open up, you can learn most of what you need to know."

"A marketing employee has a different perspective than a laborer. Each job requires a special perspective, and you have to teach people how to interact with each other and the customer."

Lambertson interviews employees, supervisors, executives and customers and then holds meetings to see how groups interact. Upon completing these studies, he offers an analysis of the company's current status, its problems and ways to solve them.

The solution, he said, may be anything from his own consulting to finding outside help. The company may need something as simple as new lighting, or it may need to be completely overhauled because of excessive problems, including money, he said.

"Even though a company may be as efficient as possible, one employee may be having problems that are dragging everyone else down," he said. "Bad employees usually get weeded out, but it may take a company a long time to do that."

"You have to get annual sociology checkups, just like you check up on everything else in your company."

Our Studies, Ourselves Barry Glassner, Rosanna Hertz, 2003 What motivates a lifelong scholarly pursuit and how do one s studies inform life outside the academy Sociologists who live in families but also study families who go to work but also study work who participate in communities but also try to understand communities have an especially intimate relation to their research Growing up poor struggling as a woman in a male dominated profession participating in protests against the Vietnam War facts of life influence research agendas individual understandings of the world and ultimately the shape of the discipline as a whole Barry Glassner and Rosanna Hertz asked twenty two of America's most prominent sociologists to reflect upon how their personal lives influenced their research and vice versa how their research has influenced their lives In this volume the authors reveal with candor and discernment how world events political commitments and unanticipated constraints influenced the course of their careers They disclose how race class and gender proved to be pivotal elements in the course of their individual lives and in how they carry out their research Faced with academic institutions that did not hire or promote persons of their gender race sexual orientation or physical disability they invented new routes to success within their fields Faced with disappointments in political organizations to which they were devoted they found ways to integrate their disillusionment into their research agendas While some of the contributors radically changed their political commitments and others saw more stability none stood still An intimate look at biography and craft these snapshots provide a fascinating glimpse of the sociological life for colleagues other academics and aspiring young sociologists The collection demonstrates how inequalities and injustices can be made into motors for scholarly research which in turn have the power to change individual life courses and entire societies contained in this book capture the stories behind the invention of criminology's major theoretical perspectives and preserves information from the generation that defined the field for the past decades that otherwise would have been lost. This history shows criminology to be a human enterprise. Its ideas were not driven primarily by data nor were the theories invented solely as part of the scientific process. To the contrary, American criminology's great theories most often preceded the collection of data; they guided and produced empirical inquiry, not vice versa. This volume demonstrates that humanity is what makes theory possible in that diverse experiences allow individual scholars to see the world differently and thus shape theoretical paradigms based on their own unique life stories.

CyberUnion Arthur B. Shostack, 2016-09-16

Key players in organized labour in the USA and abroad are busy modernizing their communications and making creative and effective use of computers and other technology. The author of this book argues that the road to CyberUnion has begun and that those unions are ensuring a future strength.

Viable Utopian Ideas Art Shostak, 2015-06-11

Utopias, whether philosophical, literary, or actual experiments, are attempts to solve all social problems. In the wake of the attack on the World Trade Center, unfolding corporate scandals, and other devastating shocks, it is natural to search for practical lessons in utopian literature. In this collection, noted sociologists renew the call to develop an altruistic social order. They address a wide variety of topics as they look for viable utopian ideas that can be applied to today's society. Written in an engaging, jargon-free style and directed to introductory sociology students as well as anyone concerned with social problems, the book provides both visionary ideals and insights for pragmatic decision-making as we venture into an uncertain future.

The Cyberunion Handbook Arthur B. Shostak, 2002

CyberUnion presented a bold plan for unions to adopt four strategic aids: futuristics, innovations, services, and traditions, knit together by InfoTech resources. This handbook expands on the FIST model with practical information on using technology to advance labour's interests.

Inside the Whale Colin Bell, S. Encel, 2016-06-06

Inside the Whale: Ten Personal Accounts of Social Research reflects on the preoccupations of social research. More specifically, this book challenges the ways in which social research is normally written up, published, and taught. It shows that social research is a social and political activity rather than a set of techniques to be applied to the world out there. It thus places greater emphasis on social and political concerns over techniques. This book consists of 10 chapters and begins by explaining the metaphor of the whale, coined by Henry Miller to denote withdrawal from society and used by George Orwell to imply that the whale is society and that we should spy out the interior. It then considers the nature of science and sociology as well as the fundamental nature of society. The following chapters explore the issues raised by power, force, and violence; proposed reforms for some housing and banking processes in Australia; social research consultancies in the 1970s; research on women, academics, and postgraduate research. Other chapters describe the ethos and the milieu of social research, including a fieldwork on Australian aborigines. This monograph will be of interest to sociologists, social scientists, and social researchers.
