Mechanobiology J. F. Stoltz, 2004 Mechanobiology is now a vigorous branch of biomechanics and biorheology which is mainly concerned with the study of the influence of mechanical forces on cells and tissues and their clinical or therapeutical applications As we are now at the age of proteomics and genomics and of cell micromechanical approaches using methods like laser tweezers or confocal microscopy mechanobiology brings new challenges With these new researches mechanobiology is the promise of new diagnostic and therapeutic approaches T to the system under scrutiny and that stresses are implicated in tissue physiology for example by the production of the extracellular matrix secretions i e production of NO and prostaglandins by endothelial cells or for the induction of specific functions via intercellular communication hence the interest from pharmacology in studies on new molecules Moreover these new findings have led to the development of tissue engineering which is the concept of substitute tissue developed in vitro from bioresorbable or non bioresorbable scaffolds and from cells harvested in a physiologic mechanical environment such as from cartilage bone and vessels At the same time the problem of cell grafting in tissue repair and especially the use of stem cells have led to new therapeutic fields

Prevention and Health Promotion for the Excluded and the Destitute in Europe Pierre Chauvin, 2002 The social inequalities of health have persisted or even increased in Europe in the last few years This text presents the experiences of professionals from various institutional backgrounds in eight European countries as well as their recommendations to improve the access of excluded people

EUROHIS A. Nosikov, Claire Gudex, 2003 The EUROHIS project has focused on the comparability of health surveys and has uncovered some problems that arise when aiming to compare data from different countries. Similar problems of cross cultural comparability also arise when comparing data from other sources such as health registers and are just as complex and difficult to tackle. One of the main advantages of health surveys however is the relatively low cost and time involved in adapting them according to the needs of health policy makers. This work shows that the output from the EUROHIS project provides common instruments for the measurement of eight health indicators. The development of these instruments has required careful consideration of relevant common concepts and how these should be defined and operationalized. The instruments are freely available for use by all countries with the aim of enhancing national health information systems and facilitating cross national comparisons of health data.

Doctors' Errors and Mistakes of Medicine Moshe Wolman, Ruth Manor, 2004. During the last decades healthcare in the various industrialized countries has been deteriorating steadily. The enormous progress of medicine in the same period could only partly compensate for the loss. This book describes the deterioration of healthcare that increases continually. It analyses its causes and outlines the measures that might prevent or at least slow the change. The deterioration of healthcare variable in different fields progressing at different paces in the various industrialized countries is produced mainly by two types of causes. Minor ones resulting from lack of knowledge or by inadequate equipment or procedures can be corrected by relatively simple means such as education and technical or procedural improvements. The major causes for the deterioration involve general policy whose effects are the steady decrease in monitoring health care and the change of healthcare into profit seeking service. The data collected and its analysis is based on over 300 articles in major medical and nursing journals. It has three parts: part 1 deals with individual doctors' errors; part 2 with errors of the medical establishment; and part 3 is devoted to more theoretical aspects.

Engaging the World Søren Holm, Monique F. Jonas, 2004. Holm, Institute of Medicine Law and Bioethics, University of Manchester, UK, and Jonas, Center for Social Ethics and Policy, University of Manchester, gather papers representing the work performed as part of the Empirical Methods in Bioethics project sponsored by the European Commission DG Research. The papers are mainly concerned with investigating the impact of healthcare on society.

Drug Discovery and Design John Matsoukas, Thomas Mavromoustakos, 2002. This work covers review articles and research articles related to the Bioactive Drugs in Drug Discovery Design. It covers the synthesis and properties of bioactive molecules and enzymes, the role of membranes in drug activity and formulation.

Glial Interfaces in the Nervous System Håkan Aldskogius, John Fraher, 2002. Glial cells are commonly viewed as subordinate players to the functional requirements of neighbouring neurons in normal as well as pathological conditions. These neuron-glial interactions are crucial for the development, maintenance, plasticity and repair of the nervous system. They are also dependent upon and/or influenced by interactions between glial cells themselves.

Patient Charges and Decision Making Behaviours of Consumers and Physicians Christine Huttin, 2003. This volume analyses whether and how cost to the patient influences physicians' treatment choices and patients' decision making process for pharmaceutical and primary care services in seven different reimbursement systems in Europe Austria Finland France Germany Italy the Netherlands and the UK The Growth Plate Irving M. Shapiro, Barbara Boyan, H. Clarke Anderson, 2002 Evidence generated by a number of genetic studies indicates that growth is regulated by a number of genes and that interference with their expression can have catastrophic effects on the well being of the whole organism This work covers skeletal development and growth

Rationing of Medical Services in Europe Johann-Matthias Schulenburg (Graf von der.), Michael Blanke, 2004 Healthcare regulations should guarantee that everybody has access to appropriate healthcare The main goals for healthcare are Equal access to health care for everyone Cost efficient production of health services and Cost control of public expenditure for medical services Especially cost control seems to be a global problem One of the key issues in the debate on how to improve healthcare is rationing It is an important challenge to understand the various methods of rationing in medical care to analyse the effects of rationing and the ways to harmonize the various rationing cultures in Europe This publication gives a comprehensive overview of the perception of different population groups in an international context and it shows how the different population and occupational groups estimate the possibilities forms and also limits rationing in the near future Patients who are affected by rationing decisions could ask for treatment in foreign European countries In order to limit social inequities caused by capacity problems in less rationed countries it is important in a first step to demonstrate the differences in rationing procedures between European countries

Recent Trends in the Acetylcholinesterase System Mahira Parveen, Santosh Kumar, 2005 The enzyme acetylcholinesterase AChE has drawn the attention of scientist as it has played a striking role in Alzheimer's disease Cardiac diseases and other diseases A good discussion and overview document on AChE enzyme and its various aspects was felt lacking since a long time in the field of enzyme biochemistry as well as enzyme biotechnology and this publication fills this gap Before this publication there was no data available on AChE enzyme inhibition its kinetics its peripheral sites their role in catalytic and noncholinergic function of enzyme ACh receptors AChE and BuChE genes etc All these topics together form a good basis for researchers and post graduate students in this field of interest This book is a collection of recent advanced reports and data on AChE enzyme

Mind, Brain, Body, and Behavior Ingrid G. Farreras, Caroline Hannaway, Victoria Angela Harden, 2004 Provides insights not only into the work of the National Institutes of Health but the relationship between institutional and governmental structures and the manner in which they influenced the direction taken by individual scientists The recollections of the individuals in the intramural program juxtaposed alongside whatever primary sources have survived also provide an equally fascinating contrast It provides a perspective that can illuminate contemporary policy debates about the nature and direction of biomedical and social science research as well as the relationships between government and science

Ethical Function in Hospital Ethics Committees Guy Lebeer, 2002 This monograph was written to present the results of the concerted action called Ethical Function in Hospital Ethics Committees funded by the European Union in the context of the BIOMED II programme Ethics committees as a principle national clinical or for research do appear as quite innovative in the hospital environment They offer an opportunity deep in the clinical practice to think about wide and subtle issues of medicine throughout a variety of discourses coming from philosophy social sciences law and laymen as well     The European Union and Health Services Reinhard Busse,Matthias Wismar,Philip C. Berman,2002 While most Member States Governments have assumed that they have full responsibility and control over their own health services it is becoming increasingly apparent that the Single European Market is having a substantial impact on health services Recent rulings by the European Court of Justice ECJ have in particular established the freedom of citizens to choose health care goods and services across borders To examine the actual relationship between the SEM and health services this book identifies SEM regulations and directives as well as ECJ decisions which explicitly refer to health services and which therefore have a potential impact on the purchasing supply and delivery of health services evaluates the impact of SEM regulations and ECJ decisions on the purchasing supply and delivery of health services identifies outcomes including both intended and unintended effects of the SEM on Member States health services and develops future scenarios exploring key issues identified in the earlier analysis and evaluation     Palliative Care in Europe H. ten Have,Rien Janssens,2001 This text is concerned with the organization ideas and problems of palliative care in the European context As a result of a BIOMED project various organizations concepts and problematic issues of palliative care have been studied and described     Estrogens, Estrogen Receptor and Breast Cancer Fritz F. Parl,2000 Estrogens have been implicated to play a role in the development of breast cancer The purpose of this book is to provide a comprehensive analysis of experimental clinical and epidemiological evidence in support of the carcinogenicity of estrogens     Kraks blaa bog Ove Holger Krak,2010     The Future of Orthodontics Carine Carels,Guy Willems,1998     Cleft and Craniofacial Orthodontics Pradip R.
