Quality of Life after Open Heart Surgery P.J. Walter,2012-12-06 primary goal of all forms of therapy is not just prolonging life but improving the quality of life has forced analysis of what constitutes quality of life a concept whose structure pervades all walks of life and eludes definition Global well being happiness morale vitality fullness of social life and satisfaction must be integrated and assessed for the effects of the disease and the therapy in the context of specific personality traits attitudes to life family situation and socio economic and political freedom A growing interest in research on this subject has led to a clearer understanding of the components which come to determine quality of a patient's life and how they can be measured in a reproducible manner so that valid comparisons can be made Keeping these recommendations of analysing quality of life within the context of patients who have undergone open heart surgery it seemed appropriate to me to separate the influence of various forms of open heart surgery into five aspects of life which can comprehensively reflect the quality of life outcome of the operation These five components are 1 Physiological state which summarises the traditionally reported incidence of operative mortality and morbidity objectively and subjectively measured physical capacity and the residual symptoms treatment and long term survival 2 Intellectual functioning relates to the psychoneurological deficit in memory reasoning or judgement because of cerebral microembolism and hypoperfusion during cardiopulmonary bypass

Promoting Healthy Aging Across the Lifespan Elena Carrillo-Alvarez, Miriam Rodriguez-Monforte,Jordi Vilaró, Katherine Simone McGilton,2024-12-26 Worldwide there is a generalized trend toward aged societies Between 2015 and 2050 the proportion of the world's population over 60 years will nearly double from 12% to 22% As life expectancy continues to increase and natality rates lower not only the composition of countries will change but also its health landscape However an increased life expectancy does not necessarily mean a healthy life In most high income countries more than 20% of those years are lived in ill health due to chronic conditions caused by non communicable diseases which compromises functional ability and well being key components of healthy aging In this way not only people s lives but also societal structures are being affected Based on the life course approach to healthy aging aging starts from conception In this regard the promotion of healthy aging requires preventive strategies that enhance capacities during growth and development maintain them for as long as possible after maturity and slow down their rate of decline Moreover considering healthy aging across the lifespan entails focusing on different factors life opportunities and choices that might significantly influence health status lifestyle as well as health and social inequalities in older age and challenges the focus of most research on the topic which exclusively investigates the effect of influences operating in the later stages of life
