

The image is a composite. In the foreground, a farmer wearing a straw hat and blue overalls is seen from behind, holding a long wooden pole across his shoulders. He is standing in a vast, green field with distinct rows of crops. In the background, a large industrial factory with several tall smokestacks is visible. Thick plumes of smoke are rising from the stacks, filling the sky with a mix of orange, yellow, and blue hues, suggesting a sunset or sunrise. The overall scene contrasts agriculture with industrialization.

Leonardsen,2004-08-20 Criminologists have despaired that modernization and crime are inseparable The more modern we become the more criminal Japan has long been seen as an exception to the rule The reasons for this however have not been well understood In this book the independent value of culture is explored to reveal new insights The author finds that while it remains the case that crime reduction may come at some cost to individual autonomy the West can learn from Japan to reduce the social harm of too much freedom Instead of endless crime prevention programs through social engineering policy makers could pay more attention to sociological insights concerning responsibility obligations and collective identities
