Longevity And Quality Of Life:

Longevity and Quality of Life Robert N. Butler, Claude Jasmin, 2000-04-30 Nations around the world are experiencing a spectacular increase in longevity. Society as a whole is being challenged by issues arising from this revolution in longevity. Although the specter of the loneliness and existential suffering of older citizens is such that some people under the age of 65 find it difficult to conceive of a long term future, persons over 85 have proven that aging does not necessarily preclude a healthy and productive life. Extraordinary progress in both curative and preventive medicine justifies optimism about the quality of life and state of well being that can be enjoyed even in great old age. We should look to professionals in diverse fields to develop creative solutions to the inevitable issues that will arise with aging. Governments must prepare for the future health of their citizens by making long term investments to educate all sectors of society in the value of good nutrition, exercise and lifestyles that enhance well being throughout life. Also, governments should realize that the main cause of health care expenditure is serious illness which occurs in persons of all ages and not predominantly in older people. Early detection can help save lives as well. Health and longevity of life will ultimately end as a political issue. What is needed is long term government investments necessary for a viable health policy. The question arises: will world leaders be able to commit to such a policy? Two major socioeconomic phenomena may have a regulating effect on this issue. The first is the emergence of pressure groups that have come into being in response to a particular health issue such as AIDS. The second is the emergence of ethics committees in developed nations that deal solely with health issues.

The Longevity Revolution

Robert N. Butler, 2009-09-08 Pulitzer prize winning author Dr Robert Butler coined the term ageism and made Alzheimer's a familiar word. Now he brings his formidable knowledge and experience in aging issues to a recent and unprecedented achievement: the extension of human life expectancy by thirty years. As Butler shows, our society had not yet adapted to this change. The U.S. has not made a research investment in aging. Only eleven medical schools out of 145 have geriatrics departments compared to England where geriatrics is the number two specialty. We have not solidified private pension plans or strengthened Social Security to ensure that people do not outlive their resources. In this urgent and ultimately optimistic book, Dr Butler shows why and how we must re-examine our personal and societal approach to aging right now so that the boomers and the generations that follow may have a financially secure, vigorous and healthy final chapter of life.
