Training Directory of the Rehabilitation Research and Training Centers, 1977-78 Arkansas Rehabilitation Research and Training Center. Information Exchange Program,1978 Reading Embodied Citizenship Emily Russell,2011-02-25 Liberal individualism a foundational concept of American politics assumes an essentially homogeneous population of independent citizens When confronted with physical disability and the contradiction of seemingly unruly bodies however the public searches for a story that can make sense of the difference The narrative that ensues makes abnormality an important part of the dialogue about what a genuine citizen is though its role is concealed as an exception to the rule of individuality rather than a defining difference Reading Embodied Citizenship brings disability to the forefront illuminating its role in constituting what counts as U S citizenship Drawing from major figures in American literature including Mark Twain Flannery O Connor Carson McCullers and David Foster Wallace as well as introducing texts from the emerging canon of disability studies Emily Russell demonstrates the place of disability at the core of American ideals The narratives prompted by the encounter between physical difference and the body politic require a new understanding of embodiment as a necessary conjunction of physical textual and social bodies Russell examines literature to explore and unsettle long held assumptions about American citizenship

Psychological Aspects of Physical Disability James F. Garrett,1952 As workers in the field of rehabilitation we are realizing more and more that we do not rehabilitate people Rather we must be able to reach the heart and mind of the individual with whom we are dealing so he will want to avail himself of the services our program can provide for him His drive to accomplish his own rehabilitation must come from within himself and we must be sensitive too in the factors that can help or hinder establishing this indispensable primary base for rehabilitation Increasingly we are learning that human motivation is influenced by many things Especially important are the psychological and social factors of an individual s life These factors are important to consider early in our planning for the whole program of rehabilitation for the individual and in the evaluation of each step of its development This bulletin was written primarily for vocational rehabilitation counselors It is expected that it will assist them in planning better rehabilitation programs The need for awareness of the psychological adjustment mechanisms of the physically disabled is not confined to the counselor however and it is hoped that physicians social workers psychologists and placement specialists may profit from the contents of this publication The cooperation and coordination of the various specialties is the most important element today in providing rehabilitation services for the disabled whereby they may take their rightful place as contributing members of society The interest and cooperation of the authors and the organizations many of them represent is a practical demonstration of the vital nature of the material presented herein We are aware of the fact that successful rehabilitation programs depend on integrated community activity and in a sense this bulletin epitomizes that approach Foreword

Psychological and Behavioral Aspects of Physical Disability James E. Lindemann, 2012-12-06 A relationship between the disciplines of psychology and medicine is evident in writings from the beginnings of recorded history This interaction was characterized in some epochs by mutual interest and support only to be followed by periods of relative disinterest During the past century there have been several formal attempts to acknowledge this interdependence and to revive and codify on a more permanent basis the working relationships between practitioners and scientists from both psychology and medicine These twentieth century waves of interest which have also come and gone have been identified by such names as psychosomatic medicine and rehabilitation psychology For a variety of reasons notably the lack of a sufficient knowledge base in either discipline the desired partnership has not come to full flower This state of affairs seems to be changing as we enter the last two decades of the twentieth century In the American Psychologist in September 1980 I reviewed recent developments in psychology and in medicine and in federal and private funding patterns which give evidence of revitalizing this partnership between these two disciplines and their relevant subspecialties For example after six decades of spectacular biomedical scientific advances which have all but eradicated such life threatening diseases as polio myelitis and tuberculosis leaders in medicine the behavioral sciences and other segments of society reached a consensus during the 1970s that the behavior of the individual is one of today's unexplored frontiers for modern medical practice and related good health care
