Introduction and Context

It is a categorical belief that the clean environment is the fundamental right of every citizen under Article 21 and the local as well as state authorities must ensure that public health is well-maintained by all possible means. Following the same, a 2019 order by National Green Tribunal (NGT) was noted to overcome the financial inability.

Cities having population more than 100,000 produce 67,000 tons per day or 44% of total waste generated in the country, as per reported by July 18, 2019 answer in the Lok Sabha. The NGT asked the central and state government to form the guidelines to implement Solid Waste Management Rules, 2016. To speed-up the process, NGT announced that any state or union territory which does not comply with these statutory obligations shall be liable to be proceeded against as per the Environment (Protection) Act, 1986. Also, the state would be asked to pay a fine, and the senior officer of the state or local body could also be personally liable [1].

“The stark reality is that no one wants to pay for this. No one believes they are responsible for the garbage they produce even though India has always followed the principle that the polluter pays,” said Shah of Swaha, the company making mobile composting vans.

But “the success of Indore shows that this is doable” It’s a lighthouse project for MP, and for other similar cities across the country.”

In 10 years, Indore will create 2,000 metric tons of waste every day, up from the current 1,300 metric tons, as per estimations. The point is to diminish this waste and keep it at 1,500 metric tons, particularly by lessening plastic waste and usable food waste.

India’s cleanliness overview depends on the on-ground confirmation, resident input, handling of waste, innovative methodologies, financial sustainability, and recovering solid waste administration costs, isolation at source, and nature
