An intragenetic typology of Kwa serial verb constructions

Abstract: This article presents the results of an intragenetic crosslinguistic study of serial verb constructions (SVCs) in Kwa. Based on a sample of 28 Kwa languages, the article examines the crucial morphosyntactic features of Kwa SVCs and the range of meanings of the two most common grammaticalized types of Kwa SVCs, 'take' and 'give' SVCs. The morphosyntactic features of SVCs considered include unity of subject, unity of TAM, unity of negation, and absence of an overt marker of a syntactic relation. The three types of 'take' SVCs — lative 'take' SVCs, instrumental 'take' SVCs, and objectal 'take' SVCs — are treated separately. Uses of different types of 'take' SVCs and of 'give' SVCs turn out to be subject to implicational cross-Kwa restrictions that are formulated via hierarchies or semantic maps. Significant crosslinguistic variation is discovered, and it is argued that sometimes the similarities between Kwa languages can be most naturally explained by independent development.

1 Introduction

1.1 Goals

This article deals with the intragenetic typology of serial verb constructions (henceforth SVCs) in Kwa. Being a well-known feature of this language family, SVCs were previously analysed in detail mostly based on data of the best-described languages, such as Akan, Ewe, Fon, and Baule.[1] As a result, the peculiarities of these languages were extrapolated to the language family as a 1 Common assumptions about "Kwa-type" SVCs are based on Igbo and Yoruba data, although these languages are no longer classified as Kwa since Bennett & Sterk (1977). Hyman (2004),

Mainland Southeast Asia N.J. Enfield,Bernard Comrie,2015-03-30 The studies in this book represent the rich diverse and substantial research being conducted today in the linguistics of Mainland Southeast Asia The chapters cover a broad scope Several studies address questions of language relatedness often challenging conventional assumptions about the status of language contact as an explanatory factor in accounting for linguistic similarities Several address the question of Mainland Southeast Asia as a linguistic area exploring new ways to imagine and define the boundaries and indeed the boundedness of a Mainland Southeast Asia area Two contributions rethink the received notion of the sesquisyllable with new empirical and theoretical angles And a set of chapters explores topics in the morphology and syntax of the region s languages sometimes challenging orthodox assumptions and claims about what a typical language of Mainland Southeast Asia is like Written by leading researchers in the field and with a substantial overview of current knowledge and new directions by the volume editors N J Enfield and Bernard Comrie this book will serve as an authoritative source on where the linguistics of Mainland Southeast Asia is at and where it is heading Coding Participant Marking Gerrit J. Dimmendaal,2009-04-22 Whereas Africa as a typological area is often associated with extensive verb morphology and verb serialization this collection of studies shows that there is tremendous typological diversity at the clausal level Verb serialization in the Khoisan area contrasts with extensive case marking in languages of northeastern Africa which also use converbs and light verb plus coverb constructions Although the categorial distinction between nouns and verbs is generally clear in African languages a number of them nevertheless provide intricate analytical challenges in this respect Whereas some languages are strongly head marking at the clausal level others manifest an interesting mixture of alternative strategies for the coding of participants The analysis of information packaging and related issues such as split ergativity Differential Object Marking and discourse configurational properties also play a role in several contributions The collection contains not only innovative analyses for the respective language families these languages belong to but also material relevant for the current debate in theoretical linguistics concerning lexical specification as against construction based approaches towards argument structure

Pre-Historical Language Contact in Peruvian Amazonia Luis Miguel Rojas-Berscia,2021-05-27 South America was populated relatively recently probably around 15 000 years ago Yet instead of finding a relatively small number of language families we find some 118 genealogical units So far the historical processes that underlie the current picture are not yet fully understood This book represents a preliminary attempt at understanding the socio historical dynamics behind language diversification in the region focusing on the Kawapanan languages particularly on Shawi The book provides an introduction to the ideas behind the flux approach of Dynamic linguistics and later concentrates on prehistorical language contact specifically in the northern Peruvian Andean sphere The number of studies presented shed light on a layered picture in which a number of Kawapanan lects were used in non polyglosic multilingual settings The book explores the potential contact relationships between Kawapanan languages Quechuan Aymaran Chachapuya Chol n Hibito Arawak Carib and Puelche The interest to theoretical linguists of both cognitivist and formalist schools The Oxford Handbook of Polysynthesis Michael Fortescue,Marianne Mithun,Nicholas Evans,2017-09-28 This handbook offers an extensive crosslinguistic and cross theoretical survey of polysynthetic languages in which single multi morpheme verb forms can express what would be whole sentences in English These languages and the problems they raise for linguistic analyses have long featured prominently in language descriptions and yet the essence of polysynthesis remains under discussion right down to whether it delineates a distinct coherent type rather than an assortment of frequently co occurring traits Chapters in the first part of the handbook relate polysynthesis to other issues central to linguistics such as complexity the definition of the word the nature of the lexicon idiomaticity and to typological features such as argument structure and head marking Part two contains areal studies of those geographical regions of the world where polysynthesis is particularly common such as the Arctic and Sub Arctic and northern Australia The third part examines diachronic topics such as language contact and language obsolence while part four looks at acquisition issues in different polysynthetic languages Finally part five contains detailed grammatical descriptions of over twenty languages which have been characterized as polysynthetic with special attention given to the presence or absence of potentially criterial features The Anatomy of Avoidance R. M. W. Dixon,2025-05-19 Speakers of Dyirbal in North Queensland Australia have an everyday language style which has been well described They also have an avoidance style called Jalnguy which must be used in the presence of certain tabooed kin such as the mother in law Jalnguy has the same grammar and phonology as the everyday style but the vocabularies are entirely different Jalnguy has only about one sixth as many lexemes as the everyday style with various techniques used to create a Jalnguy correspondent for each everyday style word The underlying semantic system of Dyirbal is thus realised at two levels of generality and is revealed through detailed study of the correspondences between them This monograph is the first comprehensive study of this in law avoidance language providing fascinating new insights into register variation and the complexities of kinship in Australian languages A New Grammar of Dyirbal R. M. W. Dixon,2023-01-19 This book offers a comprehensive contemporary grammar of the Dyirbal language of North Queensland It includes updated analyses of key features of the language based on recent theoretical advances and draws on the author s detailed research over the last 50 years and more The Languages of the Amazon Alexandra Y.
