interest in biomechanical approaches and provides information to all persons involved in the design evaluation and redesign of manual materials handling e.g. ergonomists, occupational physicians, orthopaedists, employers or researchers, lecturers and students. This handbook enables analysis of manual materials handlings regarding potential lumbar overload and contains the following: a comprehensive collection of data on lumbar load in typical manual materials handling activities; a load register on interbranch activities; synopses of previously analysed biomechanically challenging occupational activities; a load register on branch specific activities; explanations of the methodological approach to predicting moments and forces as well as their components in relation to the lumbar spine via biomechanical modelling; and criteria for the evaluation of load data with regard to potential lumbar overloading during single operations, working shifts and the entire occupational life. The new recommendations on maximum daily exposure for lifelong work for both men and women are bridging the former gap of biomechanically justified action frequency limits and now offer the possibility of a completely biomechanical path for risk assessment of manual materials handling. The book provides hence a serious contribution to the objectification of lumbar load and load bearing capacity aiming at an ergonomic work design of manual materials handling for short as well as long term exposures.
