The Civilising Process of Portuguese Bullfighting Fernando Ampudia de Haro, 2024-12-23 This book uses Norbert Elias's theory of the civilising process to provide a sociological and historical study of Portuguese bullfighting Its aim is to understand how bullfighting is historically configured according to the transformations undergone by the society in which it takes place This means that bullfighting is approached in terms of its relationship with factors such as social structure state power the control of violence and the sensitivities and behaviours of different social groups Its evolution and its construction as an activity can only be explained if we look at these factors from a sociological perspective that takes into account the passage of time Such a view allows us to think of bullfighting in process and figurational terms It means going back a thousand years and reconstructing a journey that overall cannot be described as a simple succession of facts laws dates and decisions by great personalities On the contrary this book argues it is a journey subject to the logic of changes in society power relations and patterns of behaviour considered suitable for social life And as a path it is not defined at random It has a direction bullfighting has been moving towards formalisation and pacification for centuries This book is of special interest to students and scholars of sociological theory historical sociology Eliasian theory and human animal relations

A Companion to Hemingway's Death in the Afternoon Miriam B. Mandel, 2009 New carefully focused essays providing a thorough examination of Hemingway's groundbreaking non-fictional work. Published in 1932, Death in the Afternoon reveals its author at the height of his intellectual and stylistic powers. By that time, Hemingway had already won critical and popular acclaim for his short stories and novels of the late twenties. A mature and self-confident artist, he now risked his career by switching from fiction to nonfiction, from American characters to Spanish bullfighters, from exotic and romantic settings to the tough world of the Spanish bullring, a world that might seem frightening and even repellant to those who do not understand it. Hemingway's nonfiction has been denied the attention that his novels and short stories have enjoyed. This Companion seeks to remedy this by applying theoretical and critical approaches to a work of nonfiction. It does so in original essays that offer a thorough, balanced examination of a complex, boundary-breaking and hitherto neglected text. The volume is broken into sections dealing with the composition, reception, and sources of Death in the Afternoon; cultural translation; cultural criticism; semiotics; and paratextual matters, and the issues of art, authorship, audience, and the literary legacy of Death in the Afternoon. The contributors to the volume, four men and seven women, lay to rest the stereotype of Hemingway as a macho writer whom women do not read, and their nationalities—British, Spanish, American, and Israeli—indicate that Death in the Afternoon, even as it focuses on a particular national art, discusses matters of universal concern.

Debating Laws A. Daniel Oliver-Lalana, 2024-01-01. This book seeks to explore the potential and actual value of parliamentary debates as a source of legislative justification. Drawing on a sample of recent Spanish legislation, the papers collected here analyse critically the rationale of several laws or legislative measures as it can be reconstructed from the respective parliamentary discussions. All issues covered have given rise to intense political, legal, and social controversy; they range from the combat against gender violence, the legal status of bullfighting, the protection of crime victims, and the so-called push backs at the border, to the regulation of euthanasia, the minimum living income, underage girls' access to abortion, and joint child custody. The volume is organised into two main parts. The first group of case studies adopts a jurisprudential perspective and examines parliamentary deliberations in the light of the theory and methodology of legislative justification; the contributions in the second part follow approaches that fall outside but are largely compatible with jurisprudence and deal with aspects such as the rhetorical strategies employed by MPs when debating bills and the role of elected legislators as constitutional interpreters.
