

White Light and Coloured Filters

Light goes in colour

White light is made up of red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet light waves.

These light waves make up the spectrum of white light.

White Light and Coloured Filters

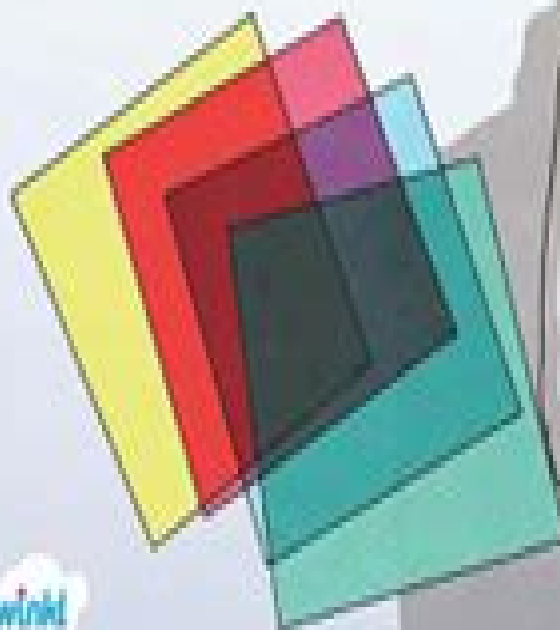

White light hits a surface. Some of the light waves are reflected and some are absorbed. The light that is reflected is the colour of the object.

For example, a green object absorbs all the colours of the spectrum except green, which is reflected. A red object absorbs all the colours of the spectrum except red, which is reflected.

This flower is yellow.
