A Comparison of Shorebird Habitat Use Between Living Shorelines and Natural Fringing Marshes Robert Michael Galvin, 2020 We examined the use of fringing marshes by herons and shorebirds in the southern portion of Chesapeake Bay From 13 pairs of natural fringing marshes and nearby constructed living shoreline marshes we completed analysis of videos recorded at discrete 30 minute intervals dawn dusk high tide low tide throughout the 2018 and 2019 field seasons May through August A total of 684 hours of recording yielded 91 individual observations of birds comprising six species Spotted Sandpipers Actitis macularia were observed most frequently 25 but only at living shoreline marshes Likewise 15 of 16 observations of Green Herons Butorides virescens were at living shoreline marshes Great Blue Herons Ardea Herodias 19 Great Egrets Ardea alba 16 and Yellow crowned Night Herons Nyctanassa violacea 14 were observed at both living shoreline and natural fringing marshes and a single Willet Tringa semipalmata was observed at a living shoreline marsh Bird species richness was significantly higher at living shoreline marshes relative to natural fringing marshes 2 2 0 26 vs 1 0 0 20 respectively Wilcoxon signed rank test $V = 45$ $p = 0.008$ Spotted Sandpipers spent significantly more time on average at living shoreline marshes relative to natural fringing marshes 514 s vs 0 s respectively $V = 36$ $p = 0.008$ as did Green Herons 341 s vs 4 s $V = 36$ $p = 0.008$ We found however no difference in time spent between marsh types for Great Blue Herons Great Egrets or Yellow crowned Night Herons From generalized linear modeling no models that included time of day time since high tide year or marsh type fit the observational data better than the null model for any species For Spotted Sandpipers the model including Julian day yielded a better fit with a positive slope indicating increased use of living shoreline marshes later in the season of observation The rocky sills placed in front of constructed living shoreline marshes appear to provide refuge and or foraging habitat for both Spotted Sandpipers and Green Herons Because use of living shoreline marshes by other heron and egret species was similar to natural fringing marshes we conclude that living shorelines as coastal management features provide habitat support for herons and shorebirds at least as well as natural fringing marshes

Birdlife at Chincoteague and the Virginia Barrier Islands Brooke Meanley, 1981 The seventy mile chain of largely uninhabited islands along the Eastern shore of Virginia is one of the last remaining natural seashore areas of the Atlantic coast These barrier islands and bordering marshlands exist today pretty much as they must have in pristine times Because of its wilderness aspect diversity and location of the islands this region has the richest assortment of bird life in the Middle Atlantic states The Eastern Shore is known for its numerous nesting colonies of terns skimmers laughing gulls herons egrets and ibises large breeding clapper rail populations large concentrations of migratory birds of various species and for its large segment of the Atlantic brant and greater snow goose populations that winter there This book deals with the nearly 200 species of shorebirds seabirds and marsh birds that have attracted bird watchers to the area since the late 1800s Finely Feathered David Lynch,2011-12-01 176 page hardcover coffee table full color book with beautiful photographic essays and text on 32 different birds of the Lowcountry Common Birds of Coastal Georgia Jim Wilson,2011 Ideal for amateur birders nature enthusiasts and visitors to the Atlantic coast this guide presents 103 species of birds commonly seen on the beaches and in the marsh and inland areas of Georgia s coastal region The guide features large color photographs for easy and immediate identification and is divided into three sections that reflect distinct types of coastal habitats backyards ponds and marshes and shore and ocean Within these three sections the species are arranged by size of bird from smaller birds such as painted buntings to larger ones such as brown pelicans Information for each bird species includes common and scientific names distinguishing marks and characteristics and descriptions of bird calls typical habitats and nesting and feeding behaviors Accounts also show variations in plumage according to sex age and season A perfect companion for residents and visitors alike Common Birds of Coastal Georgia also serves as an excellent introduction to birding bird identification and conservation North American Marsh Birds Gary Low,William Mansell,1983-01-01 Paintings of fifty two varieties of marsh birds are accompanied by descriptions of each bird s range behavior nesting and food sources "Paradise" for Bird Watchers Stuart H. Loory,1956 Life Histories of North American Marsh Birds Arthur Cleveland Bent,1926 This bulletin deals with the life histories habits and descriptions of marsh birds such as flamingos spoonbills bitterns ibises herons cranes rails gallinule and coots The Distribution of Migratory Shorebird Sightings in Essex County and Influence on the Feasibility of Shorebird Habitat Creation at Hillman Marsh Conservation Area E. Paul Chapple,1995
