Readings About Individual And Group Differences:

Explaining Individual Differences in Reading Susan A. Brady, David Braze, Carol A. Fowler, 2011-05-09 Research into reading development and reading disabilities has been dominated by phonologically guided theories for several decades. In this volume, the authors of 11 chapters report on a wide array of current research topics examining the scope, limits, and implications of a phonological theory. The chapters are organized in four sections. The first concerns the nature of the relations between script and speech that make reading possible, considering how different theories of phonology may illuminate the implications of these relations for reading development and skill. The second set of chapters focuses on phonological factors in reading acquisition that pertain to early language development, effects of dialect, the role of instruction, and orthographic learning. The third section identifies factors beyond the phonological that may influence success in learning to read by examining cognitive limitations that are sometimes comorbid with reading disabilities, contrasting the profiles of specific language impairment and dyslexia, and considering the impact of particular languages and orthographies on language acquisition. Finally, in the fourth section, behavioral, genetic, and neurological methods are used to further develop explanations of reading differences and early literacy development. The volume is an essential resource for researchers interested in the cognitive foundations of reading and literacy, language and communication disorders, or psycholinguistics and those working in reading disabilities, learning disabilities, special education, and the teaching of reading. Individual Differences in the Reading Ability of College Students Ernest Mitchell Anderson, 1928 Silent and Oral Reading Clarence Robert Stone, 1922 University of Missouri-Columbia Bulletin, 1911 Education Series University of Missouri, 1913 NAEP 1998 Reading Report Card for the Nation, 1999 Reading for Understanding Catherine Snow, 2002-04-18 In fall 1999, the Department of Education's Office of Educational Research and Improvement (OERI) asked RAND to examine how OERI might improve the quality and relevance of the education research it funds. The RAND Reading Study Group (RRSG) was charged with developing a research framework to address the most pressing issues in literacy. RRSG focused on reading comprehension, wherein the highest priorities for research are 1. Das on the PASS (Planning, Attention, Simultaneous, and Successive Processing) theory of intelligence and CAS (Cognitive Assessment System) of cognitive processes. This book reviews current research using this and other frameworks in understanding the relationships among cognition, intelligence, and achievement. The assessment and diagnosis of learning disabilities, mental retardation, and ADHD are addressed, and the interrelationships among cognition, culture, neuropsychology, academic achievement, instruction, and remediation are examined No other book has presented such an integrated view across these domains from such a diverse array of internationally known and respected experts from psychology education and neuroscience Summarizes decades of research on PASS theory and use of CAS Discusses how findings in the neuropsychology of intelligence speak to PASS theory use and application Covers use of PASS and CAS for assessing and treating a variety of learning disabilities Outlines use of PASS and CAS for enhancing learning and cognitive processes Publications University of Oregon,1923 An Investigation of Proofreaders' Illusions Harold Randolph Crosland,1924 University of Oregon Publication University of Oregon,1923
