These papers from the annual Summer Spring School of the IRTG revolve around the theme of troubling the social exploring the complex relationships between religion social worlds and transformation from the vantage point of the postcolony not so much as a geographical location but rather as a way to understand the world The contributions examine the coloniality inherent within the academic enterprises related to religion but also what how and why religious experiences worldviews and engagements count as knowledge and the implications this has for understanding examining and activating social transformation processes Processes of transformation have been prominent within the continent in the last decade and still animate crucial debates and knowledge production In these religion has figured paradoxically as the blind spot or occupied a default and marginal position However religion participates through a complex assemblage of practices subjectivities and meaning making processes in the creation of social worlds social imagination and social transformations They also explore how the decolonial renaissance is troubling the social and epistemic origins of religion and the social sciences as well as its imagined relation to social transformation Contributors are from Southern Africa and Germany societies with histories of colonialism and segregation both of which have experienced postcolonial transformations to the social fabric of their societies and both have increasingly seen calls also for critical research on coloniality religion and social transformation

Island Rivers John R. Wagner,Jerry K. Jacka,2018-06-19 Anthropologists have written a great deal about the coastal adaptations and seafaring traditions of Pacific Islanders but have had much less to say about the significance of rivers for Pacific island culture livelihood and identity The authors of this collection seek to fill that gap in the ethnographic record by drawing attention to the deep historical attachments of island communities to rivers and the ways in which those attachments are changing in response to various forms of economic development and social change In addition to making a unique contribution to Pacific island ethnography the authors of this volume speak to a global set of issues of immense importance to a world in which water scarcity conflict pollution and the degradation of riparian environments afflict growing numbers of people Several authors take a political ecology approach to their topic but the emphasis here is less on hydro politics than on the cultural meaning of rivers to the communities we describe How has the cultural significance of rivers shifted as a result of colonisation development and nation building How do people whose identities are fundamentally rooted in their relationship to a particular river renegotiate that relationship when the river is dammed to generate hydro power or polluted by mining activities How do blockages in the flow of rivers and underground springs interrupt the intergenerational transmission of local ecological knowledge and hence the ability of local communities to construct collective identities rooted in a sense of place
