Campbell, MD, 2006-06-26 All of us repeatedly grieve heal and reinvent ourselves throughout our lives Being aware of and active in this inherent aspect of our existence I believe to be a less painful and more satisfying way of living than blindly struggling with or resisting these natural processes John S Campbell M D author of A Journey Creative Grieving and Healing We all die he seems to be telling us What is far more important is that we live a meaningful life before that time comes We all need to dig deep to find our own wisdom so we may understand what John is telling us Nikki DeFrain M S and John DeFrain Ph D from their Foreword From Clinic to Classroom Howard Radest, 2000-03-30 The current development of biomedical ethics is a source of radical critique not only in the clinic but also in the classroom This volume argues that today's moral education is too abstract to be effective and would benefit from the adoption of the practical approach which is typical of biomedical ethics thinking with cases In presenting this approach Radest explores various issues of moral epistemology and advocates the urgency of realism and decision in ethics The use of a rich and complex literature drawn from biomedical ethics pedagogy and philosophy serves to stimulate the reader to think through the moral complexity and ambivalence of modern experience "Something Urgent I

Have to Say to You Herbert Leibowitz, 2024-05-01 Herbert Leibowitz's Something Urgent I Have to Say to You provides a new perspective on the life and poetry of the doctor poet William Carlos Williams, a key American writer who led one of the more eventful literary lives of the twentieth century. Friends with most of the contemporary innovators of his era, Ezra Pound, James Joyce, Ford Madox Ford, and Louis Zukofsky, among others, Williams made a radical break with the modernist tradition by seeking to invent an entirely fresh and singularly American poetic whose subject matter derived from the everyday lives of the citizens and poor immigrant communities of northern New Jersey. His poems mirrored both the conflicts of his own life and the convulsions that afflicted American society: two world wars, a rampaging pandemic, and the Great Depression. Leibowitz's biography offers a compelling description of the work that inspired a seminal controversial movement in American verse, as well as a rounded portrait of a complicated man: pugnacious and kindly, ambitious and insecure, self-critical and imaginative. Something Urgent I Have to Say to You is both a long overdue assessment of a major American writer and an entertaining examination of the twentieth-century avant-garde art and poetry scene with its memorable cast of eccentric pioneers including Marcel Duchamp, Man Ray, Marianne Moore, and Gertrude Stein.

Forty Years of Sacred Space Dr. Patrick Donovan, 2013-11-01 After forty-three years in the sacred space of caring for patients, Dr. Donovan shares his observations and thoughts about illness and healing. He believes illness serves us by acting as life's transformative process. As such, the journey through our illness may be precisely the very experiential journey we need to realize our healing and ourselves more fully. After all, we don't get cancer. Cancer, like any illness, is a process. We are the cancer; we manifest it. Our cancer arises out of our own tissues and cellular makeup. To rid ourself of our cancer is to rid ourself of a part of ourself. Instead of thinking about illness as something we get, something separate from ourselves needing to be removed or defeated, Dr. Donovan thinks we might well do better viewing our illness as a transformational journey that must be undertaken and completed for our healing to emerge. We can't get rid of ourself, but we can transform ourselves, and our illness provides us with that opportunity. It allows us our healing.
