

"How splendid! How splendid!" Mr. Bear danced in glee. Then he went ahead and made his door.

His house really looked like a house now. But there were still no windows — just big openings where the windows should fit.

"The house will be cold," sighed the rabbits. Mr. Bear was dismayed. "I shall have to ask the carpenter about windows," he decided. And so he walked to the edge of town again. There he saw the carpenter building another house.

"Mr. Carpenter," he called.

"I never met a talking bear before —" began the carpenter, scratching his head.

"All I want to know," said Mr. Bear, "is how to put a window in a house."
