Robert Forman Horton, 1885 Light Infantry of the Greek and Roman World Jean Charl du Plessis, 2024-10-30 Ancient accounts of battle often neglected the role of lightly armed infantry presenting the deeds of the heavy infantry such as Greek hoplites or Roman legionaries or dashing cavalry charges as the decisive battle winners This bias was partly due to the light infantry typically being drawn from the poorer sections of society who could not afford to equip themselves with armor and because they generally fought from a distance killing from afar with missile weapons not bravely face to face like heroes worthy of recording Modern research has generally followed this bias Dr Jean Charl Du Plessis argues that while light infantry might have had a subordinate role in pitched battles such clashes were relatively rare occurrences Most ancient campaigns consisted mostly of foraging raiding and pillaging of enemy territory minor skirmishes and ambushes all roles in which light infantry excelled In particular they were indispensable for an army traversing mountainous or forested terrain Moreover he shows that even in pitched battles they were far from useless and made a valuable contribution typically harassing the enemy as they deployed and screening friendly battle lines from similar treatment Some such as Cretan archers or Balearic slingers were highly sought after specialists Uniquely the author draws on years of practical experimentation to demonstrate and test the various weapons used slings bows and javelins including the use of the amentum throwing strap This yields fresh evidence and insights into matters such as range penetrative power and the level of skill and practice required Overall this is a valuable study of these forgotten heroes of ancient warfare Progress in Sensory Physiology, 2012-12-06 The study of the functional organization of the first synapse of the centripetal visual pathway at the outer plexiform layer level OPL ought to be made through the application of combined histological electrophysiological and neurochemical techniques A large amount of new evidence has been accumulated in the past 20 years on the structure of the retina and on the electrical responses of retinal cells to light stimulus Also recently many substances considered as neurotransmitters in the brain have been found in the retina The goal of the study of retinal function is to integrate the data obtained by structural and electrophysiological techniques and to identify and determine the role played by neurotransmitters or neuromodulators in the function of the retina In this study it is important to realize the morphological and biochemical diversity displayed by the visual cells in the vertebrate retina which according to Crescetti 1972 has been produced through the interaction of natural selection with diversity in the photic environment The evidence obtained shows that bipolar and especially horizontal cells closely related to visual cells display morphological and probably biochemical differences among classes genus and even species according to the photic environment These differences give peculiarities to the organization of the OPL which must be taken into account when studying a particular retina with electrophysiological or neurochemical techniques

Diseases of the Esophagus G. Vantrappen, J. Hellemans, 2012-12-06 This book aims to be a synthesis of our current knowledge about the normal and pathological esophagus Although a number of excellent monographs on limited aspects of esophageal pathology are available a recent handbook treating the whole of esophageal physiology and pathology is lacking We attempted to present the collected material in such a way that even the neophyte in the field would not get lost in the wealth of data For this reason we have included a number of illustrations such as classical radiological and endoscopic images manometric tracings and uncomplicated graphs which may seem superfluous for specialists but will be helpful to the reader who wants to be initiated in the subject At the same time we tried to be fairly complete so as to make available to the esophageal specialist a book of references to which he can readily turn when faced with rare diseases or unusual physiological or pathophysiological phenomena In order to achieve both aims the authors often give their own point of view when faced with controversial topics while classical as well as more recent features and concepts are mentioned and diverging opinions discussed The life of the Christians of the apostolical age Christian Karl Josias Freiherr von Bunsen, 1854 The life of the ancient church, in education, baptism, and worship, in government and social relations Christian Karl Josias Freiherr von Bunsen, 1852
