Shreve, Erik Angelone, 2010-05-28 Translation and Cognition assesses the state of the art in cognitive translation and interpreting studies by examining three important trends: methodological innovation, the evolution of research design, and the continuing integration of translation process research results with the core findings of the cognitive sciences. Several of the volume's essays focus on fruitful new process research methods such as eye tracking and keystroke logging that have arisen to supplement the use of think aloud protocols. Another set of contributions investigates how some central theories, concepts, and methods from our sister disciplines of psycholinguistics, cognitive psychology, and neuroscience can inform our understanding of translation processes and their development in novices and experts. Yet another set of essays argues that methodological innovation and integration with the cognitive sciences can lead to more robust research designs and theoretical frameworks to explain the intricacies of cognitive processing during translation and interpreting. Thus, this timely volume actively demonstrates that a new theoretical and methodological consensus in cognitive translation studies is emerging, promising to greatly improve the quality, verifiability, and generalizability of translation process research.

Voice-over Translation Eliana Franco, Anna Matamala, Pilar Orero, 2010. This book presents the first study of voice over from a wide approach including not only academic issues but also a description of the practice of voice over around the globe. The authors define the concept of voice over in Film Studies and Translation Studies and clarify the relationship between voice over and other audiovisual transfer modes. They also describe the translation process in voice over both for production and postproduction for fiction and non-fiction. The book also features course models on voice over which can be used as a source of inspiration by trainers willing to include this transfer mode in their courses. A global survey on voice over in which both practitioners and academics express their opinions and a commented bibliography on voice over complete this study. Each chapter includes exercises which both lecturers and students can find useful.

Comparable Corpora and Computer-assisted Translation Estelle Maryline Delpech, 2014-07-22. Computer-assisted translation (CAT) has always used translation memories which require the translator to have a corpus of previous translations that the CAT software can use to generate bilingual lexicons. This can be problematic when the translator does not have such a corpus, for instance when the text belongs to an emerging field. To solve this issue, CAT research has looked into the leveraging of comparable corpora, i.e. a set of texts in two or more languages which deal with the same topic but are not translations of one another. This work had two primary objectives. The first is to assess the input of lexicons extracted from comparable corpora in the context of a specialized human translation task. The second objective is to identify bilingual lexicon extraction methods which best match the translators' needs, determining the current limits of these techniques and suggesting improvements. The author focuses in particular on the identification of fertile translations, the management of multiple morphological structures, and the ranking of candidate translations. The experiments are carried out on two language pairs: English-French and English-German, and on specialized texts dealing with breast cancer. This research puts significant emphasis on applicability, methodological choices, are guided by the needs of the final users This book is organized in two parts the first part presents the applicative and scientific context of the research and the second part is given over to efforts to improve compositional translation The research work presented in this book received the PhD Thesis award 2014 from the French association for natural language processing ATALA
