D. Robert Anderson M. D., 2009-10 An anthropologist typically does research by immersing oneself in a society learning the language if need be spending a year or two observing asking questions getting involved photographing videotaping and writing copious notes on how people live their lives in other words on how they experience and manifest their culture Anthropologists call that method participant observation and the goal is to produce a cultural description that can be shared with any and all who might be interested This book describes three cultures in a single integrated narrative For one it offers a case study of the culture of anthropology itself as it records how I experienced ethnographic research as both a method and a way of life My original goal was to describe the culture of chiropractic as a prominent and important field of alternative medicine As is common in anthropology that seemingly straight forward objective detoured in an unanticipated direction I accomplished my purpose by graduating from a chiropractic college as a Doctor of Chiropractic D C Still another unanticipated diversion in this complex ethnographic adventure led to medical school but not in an accredited institution in the United States Taking a leave of absence from my professorship at Mills College I eventually graduated from a Mexican medical school as a Doctor of Medicine M D I earned qualifications in medicine and surgery by entering the profession through a back door technology and the developing world sociology of health international health and health care systems The Anthropology of Religious Conversion Andrew Buckser, Stephen D. Glazier, 2003 Table of contents Social Lives of Medicines Susan Reynolds Whyte, Sjaak van der Geest, Anita Hardon, 2002 Medicines are the core of treatment in biomedicine as in many other medical traditions As material things they have social as well as pharmacological lives with people and between people They are tokens of healing and hope as well as valuable commodities Each chapter of this book shows drugs in the hands of particular actors mothers in Manila villagers in Burkina Faso women in the Netherlands consumers in London market traders in Cameroon pharmacists in Mexico injectionists in Uganda doctors in Sri Lanka industrialists in India and policymakers in Geneva Each example is used to explore a different problem in the study of medicines such as social efficacy experiences of control skepticism and cultural politics commodification of health the attraction of technology and the marketing of images and values The book shows how anthropologists deal with the sociality of medicines through their ethnography their theorizing and their uses of knowledge
