

Darlene called from her mother's house in Athens, Georgia, where she was spending time while her mother was on a California cruise with a gentleman friend. "When's this so-called play open?" she asked. "If you have something good, it's just not thinking out."

"I told her the date."

"Will there be a cast party?"

"There may be, but you'll see the cast after the show. We already have a lot built up for the show, so it's just a matter of meeting and knowing our needs."

"I was thinking, wouldn't it be nice to have the party at your place?"

"I haven't heard a party since my humiliating 17th birthday, when my mother treated me all right."

"It's true you did. But skills are essential to creating the image of a man at ease with himself and his home. Who usually you invited to these things?"

"The cast and some other personal friends, other actors."

"But if you're looking at a new apartment, you could invite whoever you'd like."

"Yes, indeed."

"Some that. Some. Some have a girlfriend that you got along with?"

"I met her friend Fern a couple of times."

"What's what you do. Stop at work in Paris. She'll be sure to mention it to Nicky. It'll say Nicky on and that you're throwing a party she hasn't been invited to or vice versa after your birthday. Then, a couple of days after you've got Fern the invitation, and Nicky too. By the time she gets her invitation, she'll want to come to the party."

"You think so?"

"I know so. Never discount female pride. The woman she gets the card she'll be on the phone with Fern, Fern, 'What you invited today—it must have gotten stuck in the mail.' The woman's guarantee she'll show, but if she does, she'll see you for the corner of attention and realize she could have been a year wile on opening night rather than just another face."

"But, Darlene, if she walks through the door with a date, I'll see."

"If she walks through that door, I'll be with Fern. They'll meet up to compare notes later. Good, Johnny, you know nothing about women."

"That's why I rely on you. My only concern is that I haven't heard Nicky and I am still a couple, so if she..."

"Do you have to worry here?"

"It's my last friend."

"Feminist, communist. You have your notebook handy? Here's what you're going to need. I say for you some follow-up suggestions. I also want to see some photos of myself I just took. Don't get excited, they're not movies. I need your male input about the current state of my life. Can that be long, but the female's wedding here with it. I told her a female costume."

"Well, it should get the guys at the bar place a laugh."

"Yes to you. Do you have a new movie where you can get elaborate poses and animals for decorations? Goodie guys always get a party going. Remember that one I took you to where everyone had to wear green shirts? That was too."

"I've not having anyone wear hole shirts, Darlene. Besides, I've not met I can do all this, and that's where a play and there a party at the same time. Why can't you come with and be my official party companion? That way you could see the play, too."

"Well I could, but that's important that you do this on your own. But he can't go too far of places alone. The state of the apartment before the party since it's not as hot the decorations look and then have someone think the party over the party's in full swing. I want to make sure and see if don't see them because for you to parties."

"By the way, I assume you mean girlfriend."

"No, I mean husband. I really think it's time you thought about getting married. No children, Johnny, but as a single man, you're getting with the old and getting cheap. When you were younger, even to go to a few years ago, you could get away with being a little bit gay. That isn't old anymore. In your age, women expect that if you haven't gotten married or at least engaged, they may be something wrong with you, some hidden defect or deep weakness. You have to start packaging yourself as marriage material. The party is the first step."

"Maybe I don't want to get married."

"Let's not all about what you want. As a woman, I'm telling you that you need to be taken seriously as a man, and the only way for that to happen is the you to package yourself as a potential husband. All you'll see you're doing what you wanted, and where are you? What do you have to look forward to?"

"You make me sound like a brother that looked for the game."

"If you have such a thing, Johnny, how come Nicky has you off to early? I'll tell you why. She knows you weren't in the game for long. Since I've known you, Johnny, women have dumped you at a time and time out. You've gone from being dumped by Marlene after three years to being dumped by Nicky after barely six months. It's as if the women you meet come equipped with the latest computer chip, stuffing them to provide the same information about you as before. After the new upgrade, women will be rejecting you before you say hello. Women don't want to compare notes on you. You're in the collective data bank."

"This may come as news to you, Darlene, but not every woman wants to be a wife. Nicky often said she didn't know if she ever wanted to get married."

"And you believed her? Where have you been for the last 1,000 years? She was using your attitude toward marriage, and what that you said clearly looked in the last column. If you really want to know how women regard matrimony, go to a restaurant and take a look at the hotel magazine. They're the biggest, for me magazines in the country, packed with nothing but articles on weddings, engagement parties, honeymoon planning, the perfect wedding dress, etc. They're about brides, Johnny. There's nothing comparable in the male world."

"I just don't feel the wedding dress. Even the phone makes me..."

"Make you what? Jesus, Johnny, if you were any more settled, you'd reach a complete stop."

"We've never said the you were all the best to get married."

"The younger than you are, and when you want. It's your responsibility to be telling me what to do."

Mr. Lonelyhearts

With his long-awaited first novel, The Catfishers, being published this month, JAMES WOLCOTT tells the story of a sensitive young actor's search for love in New York City. In the excerpt that follows, Johnny Downs gets some treacherous, unsolicited advice on packaging himself as marriage material from his friend Darlene as they plan a cast party for the play he's rehearsing.

The story is set in Johnny Downs' garish bachelor apartment in downtown Manhattan with his messy and demanding cat, Minkie, after being betrayed and pursued throughout by his latest girlfriend, a former of once-named Nicky. Downs relies on the support of his nonexistent friend, during which, with examples, and inspiration of the female psyche. Darlene plays of Darlene, Georgia. Nicky's rejection has to him hard, harder than he expected, and he needs Darlene's help. They spend hours on the phone, Darlene's voice crackling in his ear like a whisper. She gives Johnny one week to secure the best of Nicky before putting him on a program to get his life in gear. During this period, he suffers an emotional meltdown, upon receiving his former himself to go on another movie, finding a supporting role in the Chase for Fun, a play set in the famous Lord South. The lead actress is Claudia Pennington, whose legs remind the ground when she walks and whose name of John Nicky has carried to some other actress. If he continues any further about making a movie on his, he can forget it. Darlene has bigger plans to make
