Policy Based Lending And Poverty Reduction:

Policy-based Lending and Poverty Reduction Richard Bolt, Manabu Fujimura, 2002 With reference to Asia Poverty Reduction Support Credits World Bank, 2010-05-21 This evaluation examines the relevance and effectiveness of Poverty Reduction Support Credits PRSCs introduced by the Bank in early 2001 to support comprehensive growth improve social conditions and reduce poverty in IDA countries PRSCs were intended to allow greater country ownership provide more predictable annual support exhibit more flexible conditionality and strengthen budget processes in a results based framework By September 2009 the Bank had approved 99 PRSCs totaling some 7.5 billion and representing 38% percent of IDA policy based lending The evaluation finds that in terms of process PRSCs were effective in easing conditionality increasing country ownership and aid predictability stimulating dialogue between central and sectoral ministries and improving donor harmonization In terms of content PRSCs succeeded in emphasizing public sector management and pro poor service delivery Yet in terms of results it is difficult to distinguish growth and poverty outcomes in countries with PRSCs from other better performing IDA countries There is scope for further simplifying the language of conditionality and underpinning PRSCs with better pro poor growth diagnostics PRSCs can also strengthen their results frameworks and limit sector policy content in multi sector DPLs to high level or cross cutting issues Today Bank policy has subsumed PRSCs under the broader mantle of Development Policy Lending and the rationale for a separate brand name although differences linger from the past Since PRSCs and other policy based lending have gradually converged in design remaining differences compared to other Development Policy Loans should be clearly spelled out or the separate PRSC brand name should be phased out World Bank and Poverty Alleviation United States. Infrastructure in Land-Use Dynamics and Rice Production in Viet Nam's Mekong River Delta Christopher Edmonds, 2008-06 Examines the role of infrastructure development and technical change in explaining increases in agricultural production and changes in land use in the Mekong Delta Region of Viet Nam during the mid 1990s The transportation costs involved in moving agricultural input and output between farms and markets significantly effect farm land use and production decisions Greater transport costs reduce the likelihood that farms adopt intensive cropping patterns or cultivate non rice crops Results suggest that the quality of local water management infrastructure is much more important than transport costs in explaining the increased intensity of land use and level of production observed in the Mekong Delta during the 1990s Illustrations

Japan's Development Assistance Yasutami Shimomura, John Page, Hiroshi Kato, 2016-01-26 Once the world's largest ODA provider contemporary Japan seems much less visible in international development. However, this book demonstrates that Japan, with its own aid philosophy, experiences and models of aid, has ample lessons to offer to the international community as the latter seeks new paradigms of development cooperation.

International Support for Domestic Climate Policies in Developing Countries Karstan Neuhoﬀ, 2015-02-13 This volume examines how international cooperation can support implementation of domestic climate policies in developing countries. Six case studies explore the domestic drivers and barriers for policies with climate co-benefits in developing countries and show that international support can help to overcome these constraints by providing additional resources for incremental policy costs, technical assistance, and technology cooperation to build local capacity. Cooperation can also contribute to robust institutional frameworks and government policies that facilitate increased private sector investment, which supports low-carbon production and consumption. Any such cooperation has to be anchored in domestic initiatives building on stakeholder support for policies with climate co-benefits. The studies also examine the important role played by policy indicators in successful policy implementation and how they can be linked to international incentive schemes. The contributions in this volume examine cases from institutional and national perspectives from across the globe and find that, with common but differentiated responsibility for climate policy, developed countries have to contribute more towards technological and financial support in developing countries.

Linking Emissions Trading Schemes Andreas Tuerk, 2009-09-02 A growing number of GHG emissions trading schemes are being implemented at regional or national levels. However, even as the number of different schemes grows, few linkages exist between them. Major cap and trade proposals are currently at important stages in their development, especially in the United States, Japan, and Australia, some of which explicitly emphasize the aim of linking with other schemes. One of the strategic goals of European climate policy is linking the EU ETS with other comparable schemes. The research presented in this volume is on actual economic, political, and institutional constraints and implications. It examines the role of linking trading schemes for the development of the post-Kyoto climate architecture and for increasing linkage between schemes. This essential research will be relevant to both the scientific community and for policymakers who are involved in the design of emerging trading schemes and offset mechanisms, as well as in designing the post-Kyoto climate regime. This volume focuses specifically on: o Economic, institutional, regulatory, and legal dimensions of linking o Implications of linking on the design of emerging trading schemes o The role of linking trading schemes for the development of the post-Kyoto climate regime
